County Jail Prisoners Run Their Own Court.

"Kangaroo Court" Has Sport With O. A. Strubrud Before Regular Judge Today.

THE "kangaroo court" conducted by prisoners in the County Jail dealt severely with O. A. Strubrud, arrested yesterday by Deputy Constable Druhot on a charge of usury.

"You can't put me in jail for this," he protested weakly while he was being searched in the jail office.

"Well, we'll make a try at it, anyway," responded Deputy Sheriff Glennon, dryly.

"Don't take my money, please don't," pleaded Strubrud, when the deputy fished a purse out of one pocket.

Glennon grinned and put it back. "All right, keep it, then," said another boy who was with him.

Strubrud didn't know what that meant, for he had never heard of a kangaroo court.

He was hustled down the hallway and ushered into a corridor where 30 or 40 prisoners were sitting around.

One of the huskiest of the inmates seized the newcomer and conducted him to a position at one end of the corridor.

"What are you doing in here?" demanded the court sternly.

"I'm a shifty," some one whispered. The judge's brow darkened.

"Well, you're fined a dollar and a half for getting caught. Now cough up."

"I haven't got it, honest I haven't," protested Strubrud.

"Search him," commanded the court. Two prisoners seized Strubrud and a third went through his pockets.

They found a purse with a quantity of silver. "What's this?" demanded the court.

"You lied to me. You're fined a dollar and a half more for lying."

The judge extracted $5 (which will be used to buy tobacco for the corridor) and handed back the pocketbook.
