

SOLDIERS REGARD STRIKERS AS MAD

Britons at Front Stirred by Failure of Those at Home to Supply Munitions.

PERIL NOT UNDERSTOOD

Captain of Yeomanry Tells Comrades It Depends on Workers Whether or Not War Shall Last Through Years.

LONDON, May 29.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—A forceful speech by Captain Percy Whitcomb of the Cheshire Yeomanry, emphasizing the thousands of casualties in the British forces caused directly by shortage of ammunition, was published in the Manchester Guardian, but the press bureau refused permission to certain of the London newspapers to reproduce it.

"We are just about approaching the crisis of the war," said Captain Whitcomb, "and it depends on the behavior of the people of the country whether the war is to drag on into the years. I arrived from the front on Monday. There was nothing in London to suggest that I had just left, only 60 miles away, a life-and-death struggle. Any number of young unmarried men were wandering about the streets and they certainly did not seem to be detained by business of vital importance. In the country districts the only indication of war was the notice in the railway carriages to draw down the blinds, and this was generally disregarded.

Every minute's delay momentous. "But the people must be made to realize the position, for every minute's delay is placing thousands of lives in jeopardy. "I was sent on the wild-goose chase of trying to relieve Antwerp. Then my command joined up with the main army which hung on simply by the eyelids and kept the Germans from breaking through to Calais. Thousands were killed, largely through lack of ammunition on our side. The men were kept in the trenches day after day, night after night, simply because there was nobody to relieve them. They hung on and fought as well as Britons ever fought since the world began. They fought and they died for want of forethought.

"We in this country have got to see to it that no more are thus sacrificed. "Then we were told that ammunition was coming along and that all would be well. We have seen in the papers how the brilliant infantry attack north of La Bassée covered the breaking of thousands of casualties incurred owing to lack of ammunition.

British Gunners Helpless. "On the day I was hit, we were relieving men in the trenches who were so dog-tired that they could scarcely move. At 4 o'clock in the morning the shelling by the Germans began. I had seen a certain amount of shelling before that, but everybody agreed with me that there had never been anything like this in the history of warfare. Ten, 12, 15 shells at a time were bursting up and down the line. Our gunners could do practically nothing. Contrast our position with that of the French, who quickly realized the likelihood of a shortage of shells and immediately sent back the mechanics.

"At the time of the shelling the newspapers of workmen at home going on strike for another half-price an hour, or because they were being paid a bit of extra work. What would happen if a battalion refused to go into a trench because they had only had a day of rest? What would happen if there were such a spirit at the front?"

Soldiers Think Workmen Mad. "The men in the trenches look upon these fellows who strike as being absolutely unheard of. "It is a long lane before we reach the turning of the road. We must see to it that more munitions are turned out. Lord Kitchener must have his 300,000 men today rather than tomorrow.

"We must win, but we have got to break down a machine which has been preparing for 45 years. We must let the French know that this country is going to fight with the whole and not with a quarter of its power. Those who talk about its not mattering whether they live under the German Emperor or the British King should see the terrible things I have seen. Only a strip of water separates us from it."

He was the only public man of the West to receive the latter invitation. The cancellation of the trip, Governor Lister said, was made to allow him later to attend the Governors' conference in Boston and the anti-saloon conference of Western states in Portland. BOOBS BRING TEARS

French Use Form of Laughing Gas in Missiles. EFFECT IS NOT INHUMANE

Victim Is Moved to Uncontrollable Mirth and Unable to Defend Himself for Time, but Effect Soon Wears Away.

BOLLOGNE, May 29.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Close behind the French lines near Rheims is situated the largest bomb factory in France or England. It turns out 7000 bombs of all varieties every day, as well as a variety of trench mortars and other devices for use in trench warfare. Among the newer bombs being manufactured here is a chemical hand grenade with a charge which opens the grenade and frees a liquid chemical similar in general nature to the laughing-gas used by dentists. Visitors to the factory are taken to an experimental trench close to the front. An illustration is given them of the effect which the explosion of one of these bombs has on a group of soldiers. To show that the gas is not unpleasant after-effects, a squad of soldiers is sent into a trench in which a specimen bomb has been thrown.

Men Moved to Tearful Laughter.

The effect of the fumes is to bring water to the eyes in such quantities that the occupants of the trench would be unable to escape or defend themselves for several minutes. Using a weapon would be out of the question. The pricking sensation in the eyes is not pleasant, first it is painful and the effects completely wear off in a quarter of an hour. The first effect of the gas is to throw the occupants of the trench into a fit of uncontrollable mirth, their eyes meantime streaming with tears.

It is along this section of the front that the Germans have brought into action the largest variety of chemical missiles, including, it is alleged, ether bombs, gas bombs and bombs containing inflammable liquids. Against these the French are developing a variety of missiles the contents of which aim, not at killing the enemy, but at killing the morale of the enemy, and merely at placing him out of the fighting for a limited space of time.

Eneaney's Skrapnel Cases Used.

The most common type of trench mortar manufactured in this factory is the caprouillet, or "little frog," so called on account of its squat, frog-like appearance. It is frequently made out of the enemy's skrapnel cases.

Other engines of war which are being made are catapults, arquebuses, and arbalists, which are in the stage of throwing their explosive missile without making any revealing noise of discharge.

SKIN TROUBLE ON BABY'S EAR

Great Itching, Spread in Form of Pimples, Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Well, Also Healed Ringworm.

Green River, Utah.—"Last winter my baby had a little crack appear on the top of her ear. It caused great itching. I used boracic acid water to wash it, and it would go away and maybe not reappear in weeks, but each time it would be little worse. It was badly swollen. The breaking out finally began to spread in the form of pimples, and a lump formed behind the ear. I used carbolic acid washes but they did not give permanent relief. Seeing it grow worse, I sent for some Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I used at once. The breaking out began to dry up after the first application and in one week was well and has not appeared since.

"Three and a half years ago one of my children had ringworm on his head which was very annoying. It itched so. It was very irritated and his hair came out where the breaking out was. I used home remedies without effect. I then procured a box of Cuticura Ointment which healed the ringworm." (Signed) Mrs. H. E. Blake, November 5, 1914.
