

ELSIE FERGUSON AT THE OUTCAST

Clever Star in "The Outcast" Touches Heart in Tragedy of Woman's Devotion.

PLAY IS TRUE TO LIFE

Story of Shattered Love, Wrecked Happiness and Disaster is Vividly Related, and Large Audience's Interest Intense.

BY LEONE CASS BAER. Elsie Ferguson is an actress, one of the loveliest and most accomplished, and "The Outcast" is a play, one of the season's major attractions.

if the play proves anything at all it proves that its author, Hubert Henry Davies, knows his world and men and women. In "The Outcast" he exhibits a scheme of play-making as ingenious as that of Sardou.

Woman's Devotion Graphically Told. This author has asked himself what final test of devotion it is possible for a woman to show to a man after she has been cast off as his mistress, and in his play he has answered it as ingeniously enough, thus, by making herself bigger than he is, and refusing to legalize their union when his awakened conscience pleads for a marriage.

It is assuredly a well-made play. Elsie Ferguson, with her emotional force, plays the role of Miriam, a woman of the streets, an outcast who finds protection with Geoffrey because they have a common grief.

She has been deserted by her fiance for a woman with money, and Geoffrey has been thrown over by Valentine, his fiancee, for a title and money.

Miriam's tragedy has grown cold—it has happened so far away in her early youth, and the path she has since traveled has been neither fair nor straight.

Geoffrey's hurt is more recent, in fact it is on Valentine's wedding day that the play opens, and with its memory fresh in his heart he touches in close sympathy and understanding with Miriam.

The play concerns their life together, her growing up with him, her redemption by Geoffrey, her losing fight for position and place in his scheme of things, when Valentine, tired of her title and money, seeks to return.

Pathos is Appealing. The touch of authentic tragedy is revealed in this play, with a flash of real truth. Even from the cold printed programme I can still hear the echo of Elsie Ferguson's shrill musical voice in her tremendously big scene with Geoffrey, when, as Miriam, she rebels when he puts her out of his life.

One can sense, in memory, the agony and convulsive sobs, and unconscious discovery of her heart throbbing as we recall that terrific climactic scene as though we were again witnessing the play's panting protagonist at the very depths of her vehement woe.

Completely, flawlessly, Miss Ferguson plays the role of the slinky defiant girl brought in from the streets, plays it so vividly that we take vice to our bosoms and clamor more sinned against than sinning.

Audience Banishes Scruples. She makes Miriam a creature of blood and flesh and suffering, and when she goes to bed with Geoffrey, instead of being redeemed in an orthodox manner, we all stifle our scruples again because Miss Ferguson's marvelous acting has outdone the play.

A capacity audience followed the play with unabating interest last night. A splendid supporting cast helps the play.

Charles Cherry as Geoffrey, gives a brilliant artistic achievement marked by fine restraint, force and variety. The acts are four, and the scenes are two.

Geoffrey's flat, a handsomely-furnished room with a beautiful attention to detail, and Miriam's maisonette are shown.

"The Outcast" will run all week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

MR. LEA TO REFUSE GAME WARDENSHIP

Report is Confirmed, but He Refuses to Discuss Reasons for His Decision.

CANDIDATES ARE SEVERAL

F. M. Brown, of Brownsville, is Mentioned for Place as Are Also Carl Shoemaker, of Roseburg, and Others.

It became known yesterday that A. H. Lea, who was appointed state game warden at a meeting of the State Fish and Game Commission in Salem about three months ago, has decided not to accept the position.

Mr. Lea went to Tillamook on private business yesterday, but over the long-distance telephone he confirmed information that he had decided not to accept the wardenship. Mr. Lea declined to discuss his reasons. Governor Withycombe was absent from Salem yesterday, but it is known he has been advised of Mr. Lea's decision and will make an official announcement regarding it as soon as he returns.

As Mr. Lea's appointment was not to become effective until July 1, no changes in the administration of the game department are involved. William L. Finley will continue as game warden until his transfer to the position of State Biologist goes into effect July 1.

Mr. Lea was not an active candidate for State Game Warden, and his appointment came unsolicited on his part. It is presumed that he has found that he cannot arrange his affairs to take over his position without too great a business sacrifice.

A meeting of the State Fish and Game Commission in Salem has already been called for July 24, another at this meeting Mr. Lea's successor to the appointment undoubtedly will be chosen. There is a belief in some quarters that F. M. Brown, editor of the Brownsville Times, who was appointed chief deputy game warden, will be advanced to the wardenship.

The name of Carl Shoemaker, editor of the Roseburg News, also is prominently mentioned. Ever since rumors were first heard several days ago that Mr. Lea would decline the appointment, there has been much activity by many sportsmen in behalf of Mr. Shoemaker for game warden.

Others mentioned as active or receptive candidates are Edward Morrison, of Yamhill; R. W. Ewing, of Medford; C. K. Cranston, of Pendleton; Jack Culbertson, of Portland; H. C. H. Bend, J. H. Westcott, of Gaston, and L. P. W. Quimby, of Portland.

Confidence in Mr. Lea's decision has been expressed in favor of having the appointment go to a Willamette Valley or Southern Oregon man, based on the fact that E. E. Clanton, master fish warden, was re-appointed to that place as being a Portland man. As a matter of fact, Mr. Clanton through making his headquarters here since he became master fish warden several years ago, is a Grants Pass man, and went into the fish and game department first as a deputy from that city.
