CHARMING PORTLAND GIRL BRIDE AT CHURCH CEREMONY YESTERDAY.

An interesting wedding, the announcement of which was made as a complete surprise, was solemnized yesterday morning, when Dr. Robert G. Hall, of this city, son of Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University, claimed as his bride Dr. Edith A. MacDowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. MacDowell, of Ocean, N. Y. The ceremony was solemnized in the Trinity Apartments, the Rev. John H. Boyd, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating in the presence of a few friends of the couple. Dr. Hall is well known here as a leader in child-welfare work. He is a graduate of Harvard, class of '05, and of Harvard Medical School in 1908. In the latter part of 1908 and in the following year he studied in Vienna and then came back to the United States and graduated from the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Boston Floating Hospital for Babies. He came to Portland in 1912.

Mrs. Hall is a graduate of Syracuse University and Medical School, and also has done much hospital work. It was the interest in charitable work in which their mutual profession drew them that attracted the two medicals and started their life romance. Mrs. Hall has been here for about a year and a half, and in that time has made a large number of friends. Both have been popular socially.

Dr. Hall's father is one of the most widely known writers on the subjects of eugenics and psychology, and his son frequently lectures for Portland clubs along these lines.

Mrs. E. P. Northrup entertained yesterday at her attractive home at a prettily appointed luncheon for her intimate friends. The affair was a reunion of a number of the closest school-day friends of the hostess. Pink rambler roses centered the table and marked the places for each guest.

Dr. and Mrs. A. Tilzer have returned from San Francisco. Alfred and Bernice Jane Tilzer and Miss May Comport left yesterday for the Tilzer Summer home in Carhart.

The wedding of Miss Zerene Hamilton and Clarence Howard Mayer took place yesterday afternoon at the St. Stephens Pro-Cathedral. Dean H. M. Ramsey read the service, with only the immediate members of the family and a few intimate friends in attendance. The church was decorated artistically with pink and white blossoms, ferns and palms. The bride wore a exquisite picture of blond loveliness in an ivory-toned satin and lace gown and plumed picture hat of Georgette crepe, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bride's mother, Mrs. Webb Campbell, was handsome in mauve satin. Mrs. H. E. Miller attended the bride and Gray Lemley, of Seattle, the bridegroom. A beautiful musical prelude was rendered by Carl Denton, organist, and Miss Helen Clark, pianist. Immediately following the ceremony covers were laid for 18 guests at a handsomely appointed luncheon at the Hotel Multnomah.

Mr. Mayer is a native Virginian, but three years ago took up residence in the West and is well known in club and automobile circles in the West. The young couple will reside at Seattle in the future.

St. Mark's Episcopal Church was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding ceremony on Monday, when the Rev. J. E. H. Simpson officiated. The bride, Miss Margaret A. Beeler, of Salem, and Mrs. Margaret A. Beeler. The ceremony was solemnized at noon in the presence of a few friends of the couple.

Mrs. T. Haberkorn, accompanied by her daughters, Misses Nettie and Claire, and son Carl, have opened their cottage at Gearhart and will pass the Summer there.

At a pretty home wedding last night, Miss Faye Wise became the bride of Elmer Hanson, the Rev. L. Hamilton, of University Park, officiating. The home of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. P. Wise, which was the scene of the ceremony, was decorated elaborately with roses, sweet peas and trailing vines. Mrs. Dorothy Caldwell and John Hanson, of Blaine, Wash., attended the couple. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Hanson will pass the Summer on their attractive new houseboat.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Howell, of 1061 Vaughn street, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a little son, born Tuesday.

Mrs. H. F. Sladen is visiting her mother, Mrs. T. N. Strong, of Mrs. Sladen's home in Wichita, Kan., but there are many of her girlhood friends who will delight to welcome her.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wertelmer (Gertrude Steinbach) and Mrs. M. A. Hirschner (Theresa Steinbach) are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Steinbach, at 721 Main street.

Miss Helen Wortman and Miss Edith Olds were hostesses last night at a dinner dance at the Automobile Club, honoring Miss Margaret Kent, a guest of Miss Wortman. Miss V. O. Guthrie will give a tea on Saturday for Miss Kent.

MISS Hazel Weiler and Paul Manlock will be married on Sunday by the Rev. Henry Marquette. Mr. and Mrs. Will are now on their honeymoon trip in Canada.

OREGON CITY, Or., June 30.—(Special.)—Karl Edward Bauersfeld, Mayor of Karlton, Kan., and Mrs. Pearl Brokaw, of Gladstone, were married tonight at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. E. E. Tappin, Rev. Roy L. Dinn, of the Gladstone Christian Church, officiating and only close friends and immediate relatives of the couple were present.

SOUTH BEND, Wash., June 30.—(Special.)—Miss Gail Souter, daughter of R. Souter, pioneer conductor of the Northern Pacific, was married at St. John's Episcopal Church today at high noon, to Roscoe Conklin Frost, a traveling man of Portland. A wedding breakfast was served at 12:30 to 50 friends.

cured the services of Miss Daisy E. Forrest, of Terry, Mont., to direct the kindergarten at the Chautauqua at Gladstone, July 6 to 18. Miss Forrest comes to the Chautauqua highly recommended and will hold classes in clay modeling and basket weaving, as well as child play and story telling. The programmes given in the auditorium. The kindergarten will open at 9 o'clock each morning, Saturday included, and Miss Sue Kenny will have charge of the music. A play festival will be given July 17 at 3:30, and a pageant, presenting Oregon history, probably will be given at the end of the play festival.

Mrs. Carl A. Ewald, one of the most prominent suffrage workers of the country, a personal friend of Dr. Anna Shaw, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Jane Addams, spoke on Tuesday before the women of the Immanuel Lutheran Church. Mrs. Ewald is president of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Lutheran Churches of America. She will be a speaker at one of the big conventions to be held in San Francisco next week.

An all-day meeting and rally of the missionary forces of the Congregational churches of Oregon was held yesterday in the First Congregational Church. Miss Miriam Woodberry, well-known authority on missions, was one of the principal speakers of the evening. A pageant of nations was a feature which demonstrated the broad work done by the societies represented at the meeting. The luncheon was presided over by prominent women. Among those who participated in the programme of reports and inspiring addresses were: Mrs. A. C. Moses, Mrs. George Taylor, Miss Margaret Bates, Mrs. W. C. Kantner, Mrs. Joia Millard, Mrs. M. E. Tohey, Mrs. L. J. Murdoch, Mrs. Belle T. Hoce, Mrs. Hale Bliss, Mrs. E. D. Sigler, Mrs. A. L. Calk, Professor Mary Farnham, Mrs. J. C. Bushnell, Miss Betsy, Mrs. A. J. Moore, Mrs. M. C. Toia. Children from the Sunnyside Bible class gave missionary exercises, and solos were sung by several prominent musicians, among whom were Mrs. Herman Politz and Mrs. B. S. Huntington. Mrs. Kantner is president of the Women's Home Missionary Union.

Mrs. M. L. T. Hidden spoke yesterday on "The Congressional Union," addressing the members of Central W. C. T. U. By vote, Miss Virginia Arnold, a National organizer for the Union, was invited to speak at the meeting in July.

The Making of Inconsiderate Men.
 The dressmaker was speaking with exasperation, "I do think some men are the most inconsiderate creatures that ever lived. I was sewing for the Reids yesterday and Mr. Reid was going off on a trip, and because he couldn't find something he wanted—it turned out afterward he had mislaid it himself—he stormed around and got the whole house topsy turvy, and generally raised the old boy. He had everybody in the house hunting. Poor Mrs. Reid was distracted. I tell you, went on the dressmaker, "as I go about in different homes sewing, I see men without any frills on them. And I find precious few really considerate, thoughtful men. They may be different out in the business world, where they have to be. But in the home the wife and children have to toe the mark. The men lack the consideration for those about them. If they feel out of humor, they give way to their temper. If their wife asks them to do something they don't want to, they growl. But they expect her to yield, assent to whatever they want to do. I see enough to make me quite content with being an old maid."

There are, to be sure, inconsiderate men. We all know this. But there are also very many considerate, thoughtful men, and I am not sure but that among American men, the considerate class is the larger. The American man has formed the habit of humoring his wife.

But admitting there are inconsiderate men, where do they come from? Where does the fault lie? Have they not come from homes where the boys have not been trained to be thoughtful and unselfish? Does not the fault lie with the mothers who humor their sons and indulge their every whim?

This does not mean that these men when grown to manhood should not correct this fault. They should. But many do not correct it. Often they are scarcely conscious of it, and the long years of indulgence and humoring which have been their lot have bred such a weakness of moral fiber that it is the exceptional man who will take this vice in hand and master it.

Would we not then, those of us who have boys whose characters we are moulding, train them to be considerate? Most of us teach our boys the ordinary forms of politeness. We think this necessary. We try also to teach them to be truthful and honest, to possess the major virtues. We recognize all these things as belonging to the training of children. But do we all have in mind also, thoughtfulness and consideration, and train our boys in these matters? Looking ahead to the years of manhood, can we honestly say that of the boy we are bringing up will be a thoughtful, considerate man?

Women do suffer much at the hands of the inconsiderate man. Nowadays, they suffer from him in business. But they suffer still more greatly in the home. In business every man is held within certain limitations. Policy and politeness compel him to be considerate. But in the home he is free to work his will. And if he lacks in consideration and thoughtfulness, even though he is honest and straightforward, women and children of his household suffer in many ways.

We do not need the dressmaker who sews around, the trained nurse, the maid to tell us these things, to point out the fact that the inconsiderate man exists and that he can do as much to destroy the happiness of a home as a man with, in the eyes of the world, much worse faults. We all know these things. The thing for us to do is to profit by the knowledge. We may not be able to make the inconsiderate man considerate. But we can prevent the boys in our home from becoming the inconsiderate men of the future.

And by so doing we are not only helping the woman who may become his wife and the little ones who may be his children, but we are helping him to a return of greater happiness than would be his if he grows up selfish, thoughtless, regardless of others.

THE SANDMAN STORY

By Mrs. F. A. WALKER.

The Princess of the Pearls.
 ONCE upon a time there lived two brothers on the shores of a great ocean. The sea was very blue. The sands of the shore shimmered as if of gold. And back of the beach rose great green mountains high into the shining sky.

wore little clothing, only a bit of cloth tied about their waists.

The older boy was named Waru and the younger one called Nagi. They were sovoled and beautiful.

One day, however, Waru lent his bone fishhook to Nagi and the lad lost it. This made the older boy angry, and he began to abuse the younger.

"You have lost my hook in the water," he cried. "Go find it and do not return unless you have it to bring with you."

And with that he struck his brother a blow on the head, then threw his body far out into the sea.

Nagi sank down, down, down through the cool water, for he was too much stunned to swim. At last his feet touched the sand of the bottom and he found he had floated far back under the shore. With a blow of his foot he rose to the surface of the water and discovered that he was in an immense cavern, so seemed to have been hollowed by the waves out of a soft, pink stone, and its arches were all glowing with various shells. Back in the cave sat a beautiful mermaid, combing her golden hair. All about her were scattered hundreds of pearls of every hue. Her robes were of white silk and covered with a fringe of gold. All around were fishes of various kinds busy waiting on the lovely girl.

Kagi swam over to the rock on which the girl sat and stepped ashore. She turned to him a face on which he saw traces of tears marring its beauty.

"May I ask, fair maiden, what is your sorrow?" asked the lad kindly.

"I have the greatest sorrow in the world," she replied. "I am the Princess of the Pearls, and have lived here surrounded by them for many long dreary years. I once lived on earth in my father's palace, but so vain was I that I was cast down here. I have not now many lives I ruined in my longing for pearls.

"But at last my selfishness disgusted me, and I have vowed that I will shut me up down here in the midst of them, and told me that here I must stay until some one would bring to me the most precious pearl of the world—the pearl of repentance, which falls from the eye of a sinner who weeps at his wrong."

"I will return and search for that pearl," said Nagi bravely. And out of the rocky cave he dived, then turned and ran to the top of the beach. It was moonlight as he ran down the beach. Everything shone as if touched with silver, and over all came the soft moaning of the waves. But above that sound he could hear the louder cry as if one in great sorrow. Nagi turned. There on a rock above lay his brother groaning in his sorrow at what he had done to Nagi, and as he wept one of his tears rolled down the rock to the foot of the younger lad—a beautiful soft, pink pearl.

Seeing it, Nagi dived again into the water, turned into the cave and rose at the rock on which sat the maid.

"Here is the pearl of repentance," he exclaimed, laying it at her feet.

A bright light shone in the cave. A sweet music filled the air, and over the weeping Princess hovered the fairy form of her godmother.

"I think you have learned your lesson by now and been cured of your selfishness, my child," said the fairy. "This brave, unselfish lad has saved you, and now you can return to earth. This cavern and its treasures are mine, so you and Nagi may take with you what you can carry."

"I would like to take some to my brother," said Nagi. "He loves me and is sorry for what he did."

"I think you would make the Princess very angry," said the fairy. "If you are not of royal birth, her kingdom will be happy to be ruled by such a kind, generous Prince. Enter my boat and I will take you both to the upper shore."

Nagi and the Princess, each with a bundle of pearls, got into the boat and were a long time on the beach. Nagi ran up to his brother and threw his arms around him in forgiveness and love. They were both happy. They all three set out for the palace of the Princess.

WAR ON RATS PLANNED

DR. MARCELLUS SAYS HEALTH BUREAU ALIVE TO DANGER.

Study of Conditions Being Made With View to Combating Menace to Best Advantage.

That Portland is doing all in its power to eradicate rats is the statement of City Health Officer Marcellus, who has conferred with Dr. Rupert Blue, Surgeon-General of the United States Health Service, who has made a study of rat conditions along the Pacific Coast. Dr. Marcellus says much good work has been done locally, but much remains to be done when funds become available.

"We have realized for a long time that the rat pest along the waterfront is dangerous," said Dr. Marcellus. "The expressions of Dr. Blue only emphasize what we already have told the public and the City Council. There is no reason why we should not be taking steps to stamp out the pests and thus save the possibility of an outbreak of bubonic plague in Portland."

"As a result of a recent flurry of sentiment in favor of rat eradication we have one man at work on the question. He is making a study of conditions and we hope some day to be able to follow up suggestions which he has made. Rairproofing buildings is one of the essentials. We need a good system for fighting the rats. While we get this we will get rid of the rats, which now, in addition to being dangerous from a health standpoint, are the result of destruction amounting to much more each year than would be involved in an anti-rat campaign."

2 INDICTED FOR MURDER

KILLING ILLEGITIMATE BABE DAY AFTER BIRTH IS CHARGED.

Mrs. Bessie Fowle and Daughter Aged Held Without Bail by Grand Jury. Other Bills Returned.

Mrs. Bessie S. Fowle, and her 16-year-old daughter, Harriet Fowle, were indicted for murder in the second degree and held without bail by the grand jury yesterday.

They are charged with putting to death the illegitimate child of Harriet Fowle. It is alleged that the child was suffocated the day after its birth with a camphor-soaked cloth.

When an investigation was made, the dead child was found in a shallow grave in the yard.

Three other true bills were returned by the grand jury. Chris Vasulles was held under $750 bail on two counts of obtaining money by forgery, and by false pretenses.

Giff Dunsmon and Oren J. Wood were indicted upon complaint of A. Antonich who cashed a forged check for $20 given him by the men.

Paul Waddell and Bud Milan were indicted for stealing four horses from William Livingston on June 1, 1915. They were each held for $750 bail.

ACCIDENT COSTS $122.37

Verdict Returned Against Autoist Who Struck Standing Car.

A jury in Judge McGinn's court brought in a verdict yesterday against F. Joplin for $122.37 in favor of H. P. Palmer for damages caused when Mr. Joplin's automobile struck that of Mr. Palmer on March 2, 1914.

Mr. Palmer charged that his car was standing alongside the curbing at Tenth and Multnomah streets and that Mr. Joplin drove his machine into it, damaging the machine and shaking up the occupants.

The defendant alleged contributory negligence on the part of Mr. Palmer, saying the rear lamp of the standing car was not lighted.
