The sudden jerk threw Mr. Aylesworth upon the pavement, where he struck on his head, still holding tightly to the child who was unharmed. The little boy had been placed in the vehicle by his grandfather, while the horse was tied to a fence at the East Salmon street home of the Dillers. The animal broke loose and ran down the street to East Thirty-ninth street. Mr. Aylesworth, who was out in his front yard, saw the runaway as it turned the corner.
