WOMEN'S CLUBS

By EDITH KNIGHT HOLMES.

THE annual report of the president of the Woman's Social Service Club of Oak Grove and vicinity, a branch of the Portland Woman's Club, gives a creditable showing of the work done during the year. Rural clubs have more to contend with, perhaps, than do those of the city, but social service work is needed in every community. The club has been instrumental in getting weeds and grass cut along paths and fences, in having a wooden trestle on the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railroad replaced by one of steel, in having a rail placed along the sidewalk bordering Kellogg Creek. The stations along the Oregon City line are kept cleaner and another car has been added to certain Sunday trains.

"Clean-up day" was observed by the club and much was done toward beautifying the community. A step has been taken toward a permanent home for the club, which will be a social center for the entire community.

Philanthropic work has not been neglected. Several families and individuals having been assisted. Social affairs have served to get the club members and their friends better acquainted.

The Women's Missionary Society of the White Temple has planned an all-day outing for today at Peninsula Park.

Mrs. May Wright Sewell, who probably will come to Portland in the near future to speak, has joined the advisory council of the Congressional Club, which is the former president of the International Council of Women and is prominent in the work for international peace. She recently addressed many meetings in San Francisco.

The clubwomen of Portland at the luncheon given in the Hotel Benson recently recommended to the board of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs to join the peace party. A live interest in the cause of peace is manifested here. Miss Grace De Graff has in her addresses given a new insight into the horrors of war as found by the women of Europe.

In San Francisco this week a convention in the interest of peace is being held. On Sunday Mrs. Frank

A sidelight on our work.

As we go about our various vocations this summer, we are apt to see phases of living such as do not perhaps fall under our observation in the ordinary routine of our life. We will see the contrast between those who travel luxuriously and those who travel economically. We will see those who indulge themselves in pleasure and those who, because of the needs of their purses, can only be on-lookers, who must, so to speak, gaze through the cracks in the fence at those who occupy the seats of honor inside. There will be those whose dress is of the richest and most fashionable and others whose gaily of the simplest and perhaps quite old-fashioned. And as we note these sharp contrasts in material conditions, and especially if we be of those who have the smaller amount of worldly possessions, we may grow a bit resentful, bitter or envious.

A good illustration of this was brought to my attention a few days ago. A motoring party stopped in a small village for lunch. The party consisted of a well-dressed woman. They had a large, fine car, a keen, alert chauffeur. Their appearance in every way indicated wealth, leisure, the opportunity to enjoy the good things of life. The only restaurant in the small town was right next to the general store, and as their machine waited in front of the restaurant, and as they strolled about while the meal was being prepared, a farmer's spring wagon, in which were his wife and 16-year-old daughter, drove up and stopped in front of the store. The farmer and his wife went inside. But the daughter remained in the wagon and studied the "city folks." Her eyes slowly took in all the luxuries and appointments of the car, the smart uniform of the chauffeur, the fashionable dress of the woman. And as she looked, her face grew hard and bitter. I knew the girl and I could tell by her expression just what she was thinking. So after a little while, I strolled up to the wagon and said, "Some people have everything, don't they," she said, and her tone was envious. "Gee! I wish I could take a trip in an auto like that and have pretty clothes."

Her father is a prosperous farmer with broad acres that overflow every year with grain and corn and things the world needs. She has a comfortable home, big and spacious, set amid clovers and trees, which were with her mother in the care of that home, and by her labor helps to send the farmer's supplies over the land to those who need. She is filling a useful and honorable place in the world.

But she doesn't see it that way. She just sees the monotony and the humdrum dishwashing and putting up of preserves and taking care of chickens, and in contrast with the ease and pleasure of the life of these motorists, hers seems colorless and drudging.

Not the mere matter of the way she looks at her own life or of the way she looks at the situation, however, the kernel of the situation. One can accept with cheerful resignation one's lot in life and make the best of it. But that is not getting at the core of it. One

It Ruins Hair to Wash It With Soap

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than soap or anything else you can use. One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses off easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Adv.

should get at the truth of the matter. One should know why one can take with cheerfulness what life gives. And if it cannot be taken with a cheery and glad heart, he has not yet got what life intended him to have. But in his search for the truth of the matter, he needs to be sincere and honest and not merely wish to gratify his desires.

What, then, should be the view of one's lot in life? What should be the girl's view of her lot? It is the view of all of us who seem to be doing humdrum, monotonous drudgery and getting nowhere, except, perhaps, earning our bread and butter day by day, which doesn't seem a sufficient thing to do with so big and beautiful a thing as life, does it?

Perhaps the girl's case will point the truth for all of us.

Looking at the heart and core of her worst life, that at the mere dishwashing and milk-skimming and egg-hunting, she is the life and joy of that home, the standby of her mother, the inspiration of her father. She is helping in the work of the farm, doing every day, a good, useful day's work. And such a work is necessary. Farms are necessary. If there were no one to make the rich acres of this land of ours productive, where would we as a people be? Her work is valuable in the matter of dollars and cents to the community, and her life is a happiness-maker to those in her home. She has her place, and she should compare in noting the contrast between herself and others. And these are the realities which she should compare in studying our lot in life. Are we doing something which has its useful place, its value in the progress of the world, no matter how small, or are we just selling goods or making roads, or digging ditches to carry needed water? Are we contributing also to the happiness of those about us? If we are, let us see these facts, these big, broad joy-giving realities of life, instead of the pick and shovel of the yardstick or the

Mrs. Walker's Recital of Own Compositions Wins.

Striking Originality of Music and True Poetry of Songs Make Portland Woman Distinctive.

BY JOSEPH MACQUEEN.

SEARCHING over Oregon, and the Pacific Northwest generally, for a woman who is both an educative and useful citizen, Mrs. Ralph C. Walker, of this city, is notable.

Our forefathers used to say that a woman who was a good cook and housekeeper—and nothing else—was their idea of a useful woman citizen. We Americans of 1915 expect something more than that, in measuring new ideals.

We want nowadays an American wife and mother, who is not only a good and loved home-maker, but who is also an active factor in taking part in educative environment in her home city, a woman who places her stamp for good on artistic betterment.

This sort of a new woman is Mrs. Walker, who appeared in a recital of her own musical compositions, yesterday morning at the ballroom of the Multnomah Hotel.

The event, which was largely attended, was one of the important musical successes of a busy season. This of it! The programme was not only a high class one, but every number on it was composed by Mrs. Walker.

That is why Mrs. Walker is such a notable citizen of this city. Her musical compositions show strong original-

Youthful, Wrinkleless Skin Easy to Have

You who desire to regain a youthful appearance will do well to make the acquaintance of the two simple, but valuable prescriptions here given. To make an effective wrinkle remover, mix an ounce of powdered aspirin with a half pint witch hazel. Rub the face in the solution—immediately every wrinkle is affected. It acts wonderfully on sagging facial muscles, also, the lotion possessing remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

To get rid of an aged, faded, freckled or discolored complexion, buy an ounce of common mercerized wax and mix with it a quantity of glycerine as you would cold cream, erasing this morning with soap and water. This will slowly absorb the undesirable surface skin, revealing the younger, brighter, healthier skin underneath. There's nothing to equal this treatment as a facial rejuvenator.—Adv.

Embarrassing Hairs Can Be Quickly Removed

(Beauty Culture)

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method: Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growth, one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.—Adv.
