No action on the case was taken by the police because officials said that the robbers had had ample time to escape before the report was made. Captain Circle declared that Davis had made several reports of sensational battles with thus.

battles with thugs.

Davis said that the men had met him at Third and Washington streets, and had engaged his machine for a trip to St. Johns vis Willamette boulevard. When the automobile had reached a spot on the Willamette boulevard near an embankment, the passengers asked Davis to stop. He did so.

Immediately one thrust a revolver under Davis' nose and ordered him to 'reach for the stars." Davis leaped from the automobile and the high-waymen followed, the man asserted. Davis declared that his first blow knocked the thing's revolver from his hand and sent the weapon clattering down the embankment. Face to face with only two unarmed men, Davis said that he fell to with a will and gave the men such a beating that they fled. Davis described them and said he could recognize them.

ANKLE DISPLAY RESENTED

Indian Princess Offended by Sight of Actress' Stockings.

NEW YORK, June 30 .- One of the first questions which came up for settlement before Magistrate Koenig, newly appointed and just assigned to the Tombs Court, was the mooted point as to just how much of a woman's leg she is justified in displaying to the public view, the prevailing mode of short skirts being taken duly into consideration. Mrs. Jeanne Morris, an actress, pretty, plump and only three weeks a bride, owns the shapely leg which started the discussion.
