OREGON CITY, Or., July 7.—(Special.)—In his lecture, "Farming and Being Farmed," given before an audience of 2000 at the Chautauqua this afternoon at Gladstone Park, Colonel W. H. Miller, the Illinois humorist, jollied his hearers almost to the point of hysterics and drove home some real sound conclusions regarding the man of the soil.

Colonel Miller's humor is spontaneous and his philosophy is keen. He pleads for the country town and its people. He believes in the small town, its life and its people, and argues that there are as many opportunities for the real man in the small place as in the big city. He dwelt on the necessity of educating the country boy to stay in the country to the end of his life and to them, in a realization of a better, bigger and broader life for the farmer.

Lesson of Duck Cited. Colonel Miller was formerly a country weekly in Illinois, and his anecdotes of a country editor's life are sparkling. Incidentally he took occasion to score the mail-order houses in a most furious manner, and at the same time criticized the merchants who did not advertise.

"Learn the lesson of the duck," said the Colonel, "and you will find that demand for duck eggs is 1,000,000 times greater than the supply. Why? Because the hen lays an egg—she advertises."

Professor Horner's lecture at the Oregon Agricultural College morning hour attracted an interesting series of men and women, products of the farm, many of whom were Oregonians. He mentioned the following authors: "The Man With the Hoe," by Emile Zola; "The Man With the Hoe," by Emile Zola; "The Man With the Hoe," by Emile Zola.

President Bushnell, of Pacific University, opened an interesting series of daily lectures under direction of that institution. His theme was "Efficient Use of Natural Resources."

Eugenics Test Is Today.

Tomorrow at 10 A. M. an eugenics test is to be given at the kindergarten pavilion by the parent educational bureau of the Oregon Congress of Mothers. The following are to take the examination work: Dr. A. E. Kild, Dr. A. R. Barrett, Dr. E. F. Kerr and Dr. Brown Tynan, all of Portland; Dr. Hugh Mounsey, Eugene; Dr. Meisner, Dr. Van Brakel, all of Oregon City.

Today was a beautiful day at Gladstone Park. Campers continued to swarm in all day today and by noon Thursday the entire tent city will be numbered and arranged so that Portland and other visitors for the day can find their friends with little trouble.

Morning classes in elocution, under direction of Della Crowder, of Portland, and daily Bible talks by Boyd, of Portland, began in earnest this morning with large attendances in all classes.

which would record and add amounts put out; a currency machine; no lightning change maker, which would instantly pay in smaller coin change for a large coin, and an adding machine.

"Of these machines," said Mr. Reames, "there are two admitted by all to have great sale value. One is the computing machine and the other the stock-delivery machine with the recording and adding attachment.

"These were the two principal machines used in promoting the sale of stocks. Demonstrations to prospective buyers were made with these machines, to which the company represented that it owned full patent rights at the time, but to which the Government asserts they do not own the patents even now."

After referring to circular letters which he declared had been written by Frank Menefee as president and general manager, asserting that the company had patent rights to these machines, Mr. Reames continued:

"We expect to show that when these letters went through the mails no applications for patents had even been made. The applications were not made until months afterward, and when they were made the company encountered interference in every case, on account of previous applications covering the patents."

Patent Rights Disputed. Among advertisements in the papers, he cited a double-page advertisement of October 29, 1911, in which it was set out that the United States Cashier Company controlled patents to all the machines. Mr. Reames asserted that this was months before applications for patents had been filed.

"I should also," continued Mr. Reames, "in 1912, in answer to a letter from a prospective $10,000 investor in stock, Mr. Menefee wrote that the company owned patents to four machines, and this was before applications had even been filed."

He cited numerous other letters which he said the Governor would produce to show that false statements had been made as to assets and liabilities during the life of the company's financial condition.

"On February 28, 1911," Mr. Reames said, "Mr. Le Monn, as sales manager, sent a letter to the Governor, in which he stated that the company was only $23,000 when at that time they were in excess of $100,000. Nearly a year later, on February 6, 1912, we will show, Le Monn wrote another letter to a salesman, in which he said, 'discontinue improved machinery, and the company's assets are $175,000.'"

Receipts Put at $1,532,812. He gave figures as to the amounts of the company's assets and liabilities, and the company and various officials had received.

The total amount the company received, including cash, real estate, and everything, was $1,532,812.25. In cash, for stock alone, it was paid $771,825.81. Its cash receipts, including the improved machinery, the company totaled $943,713.34.

AUDITORIUM TO MOVE

Plans to Be Pushed Along and Work to Follow.

WORK PLANNED THIS YEAR

Definite Decision for Lower Floor Is to Have Convention Hall That Will Seat 5300 Persons—Theater Provisions Are Made.

Just as quickly now as plans can be prepared and contracts let, Portland will have its long-proposed $600,000 public auditorium on the Market Block, between Second, Third, Market and Clay streets. Outside it will be architecturally beautiful.

Inside it will be flexible to fit the needs of large and small conventions, land shows, automobile shows, large social functions, permanent exhibits, theatrical productions, large and small, and exhibit rooms for the city museum and the relics of the Oregon Historical Society.

Preliminary drawings for the building were submitted to Commissioner Baker and the City Council yesterday by J. P. Foulhoux, of the architectural firm of Whitehouse & Foulhoux, representing J. H. Freedlander, of New York, who holds the contract for the architectural work on the building. These plans were gone over in detail and a number of alterations made on the exterior to make the arrangement more flexible. New drawings of the rearrangement will be submitted to the Council at a meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Big Hall Will Have 2000 Seats. The lower floor plan, as definitely decided upon, calls for a theater or convention hall to seat something like 2000 persons, with a gallery to seat about 1400 and a balcony to seat about 1000. The stage will be about 115 feet wide at the proscenium arch and 50 feet deep by feet in height to the center of the arch.

For theatrical purposes it is estimated that the building will have a seating capacity of something like 3500 persons, while for convention purposes the capacity can be increased to 5500 or more.

On one side of the main theater or convention hall will be a smaller meeting-rooms, elevated above the theater and divided off by a movable partition. This room which will be the full length of the building will be on a level with the stage. For land shows, large dances or exhibits requiring large flat floor space, the theater part will be floored over, making an exhibit chamber of the building nearly 200 feet square.

Exhibit Room Provided. This will be the flexible part of the structure. By the mere placing of a floor which is easily moved, the interior of the building on the lower floor can be transformed from a large theater into a large flat floor, eliminating the theater altogether. The upper floors will be in theater style, with the balcony and gallery looking down on the stage.

On the two upper floors will be large side rooms for exhibits, offices and ante-rooms of various kinds. On the lower floor will be toilets, restrooms, smoking-rooms, and full equipment for theatrical productions, including dressing-rooms, property-rooms and a boiler-rooms and heating plant, this room will be suitable for permanent exhibit or for parts of the exhibits too heavy for the upper floor, such as machinery.

Vestibule Will Be Spacious. The building will be 80 feet in height with a pediment 25 feet in height on the Third-street side. The front elevation will be of Ionic design, according to the proposed plans, with 10 large terra-cotta pillars 25 feet in height. The outside will be of tapestry brick of a color not yet decided upon.

As soon as the preliminary drawings are prepared, they will be approved and sent to New York where the work will be made for the letting of a contract and the commencement of the actual construction. It is the hope that work can be started on the building during the present year.

British Columbia Sends 10,442 Men. VANCOUVER, B. C., July 7.—Up to June 26, 10,442 British Columbians had been recruited in the province, of which work can be started on the building during the present year.

NOTED SHRINER VISITS

G. L. BROWN, IMPERIAL TREASURER, ON WAY TO CONCLAVE.

PORTLAND MEMBERS ENTERTAIN ADVANCE

Guard and Plan for Royal Welcome to Coming Host.

Portland Shriners yesterday played host to one of the most prominent members of their order, G. L. Brown, Imperial treasurer, and advance guard of the grand convocation of Shriners who will pass through Portland within the next ten days to attend the annual convocation at Seattle.

Mr. Brown was entertained here yesterday by W. C. Bristol, of Portland, who will be candidate for grand imperial order guard at the Seattle meeting. He left last night for Seattle, accompanied by Mrs. Brown.

Members of Al Kader Temple in Portland expect to go to Seattle in large numbers to participate in the festivities there next week. Portland's official representatives are to be George W. Stapleton, J. G. Mack, H. T. Hutchinson and W. C. Bristol.

Al Kader temple will be well represented in the annual parade of Shriners next week. The band and uniformed patrol, as well as a large body of uniformed members, will take part.

Mr. Brown expects the most part of the convocation to be one of the most successful in the history of the organization. He predicts a large attendance of Shriners from all parts of the country. They are drawn to the Coast, he says, on account of both the convention and the San Francisco exposition. Virtually all the Shriners who go to Seattle, he explains, also will visit the fair, and all such will pass through Portland.

The Portland Shriners are making elaborate plans for the entertainment of the visitors, the first of whom will arrive here on Sunday. Many organized delegations will visit the city on that day and all will be entertained by the local members.

Immediately after the big parade in Seattle the Shriners will start to move southward. Many Portland members will rush back here Wednesday night and be here early Thursday morning to receive the visitors.
