

COG SLIPS; STRIKE FAILS TO COME OFF

Union Leaders Outwitted by Manager of Remington Ammunition Works.

ADVANCE GRANTED MEN

Call Reaches Some of Other Plants, However, and Small Numbers of Machinists Walk Out, Estimated at 20 in All.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 20.—(Special.)—Contrary to the announcement of the striking labor leaders, the big machinists' strike, which was counted on to tie up operations in the Remington Arms & Ammunition Company's factory and the plants of the four sub-contractors at noon today and ultimately to spread all over New England, did not develop.

When the noon whistle blew, the appointed signal for the walkout of the 300 machinists in the arms factory, there were gathered the 23 or more international heads of labor unions.

This is how the cog slipped: When the noon whistle blew, Major Walter G. Penfield, works manager of the Remington plant, placed guards at all the exits of the arms works to tell the machinists to wait a few moments.

When the few moments had expired the foremen told the men that on behalf of the Remington companies, Major Penfield had given assurance of a permanent eight-hour day beginning August 1, and a guarantee of more money for an eight-hour day than had been paid for the 10-hour day.

Men Vote No to Strike. Meats were sent to them from the company restaurant by an underground passage and during the dinner hour they pondered the offer. Finally they voted to strike and sent Major Penfield a vote of thanks.

By this action, the machinists, 70 per cent of whom are men, repudiated their leaders and the vote they took last Friday to strike.

The strike leaders succeeded in getting the strike call to the machinists in the plants of the Bridgeport Engineering Company, where 28 men struck; to the Gaylor Manufacturing Company, where 12 men walked out; to the Middle Street Remington plant, where 12 struck, and to the Columbia Bolt & Nut Company, where eight men went out.

The terms arrived at grant a substantial increase in wages and involve concessions to the strikers, which are considered by their executive committee as tantamount to an admission of the miners' claims on nearly all the outstanding points. The delegates were visiting their district tonight canvassing the sentiment preparatory to tomorrow's vote.
