READY FOR A NATION DRY?

There has been much of late to encourage the prohibition enthusiast into bellef that "the time nationally to outlaw the liquor traffic has arrived" and that the movement may gain even world-wide momentum. War's necessities have abolished or restricted drinking in several European countries, nineteen states in America have gone dry, while seven provinces in Canada either have temperance legislation in effect or are facing its seemingly irresistible progress.

But it is not always safe to place prohibition. Possibly no other movement can disclose as remarkable a history wholly modern. The Cartha- ment than has Portland." prohibition would have been quite as we surmise are better-far better. revolutionary as Russia's inhibition gaged in nothing but winegrowing.

In modern times a prohibition wave tions than the one we are now witnessing swept over America. About was only nominal. In others it was almost wholly ineffective. None clung to the principle without a setback except Maine. But the states that adopted prohibition then were among included a much greater proportion tem." present nineteen dry states.

In testing the permanency of pro hibition today, however, it cannot be overlooked that the principle is betfortified than ever before Throughout its experimental stage various important things have been learned about its enforcement; constitutional errors that invalidated earlier statutes have been learned or courts have acquired a different view of the meaning of liberty; some of the loopholes in interstate commerce have been closed by Congressional acts, and perhaps of equal importance is the transition of the prohibition question from almost wholly a moral and sentimental issue to an economic

Way to Blust Stumps.

CORVALLIS, Or., July 28 .- (To the Editor.)-After having read an article on stump blasting by someone who signs himself "California Cultivator," I would like to say a few words which may be of use to those wishing to blast not only stumps but rock or anything. I like California's suggestions—they are all right—but there are other things to be considered. A good way to blast a big stump is to bore a hole well down under it with an augur; get a little past the center if possible; then lower about one-fifth of a stick of
