Extension of Civil Service Rules, Measures to Promote Health, School Inspection Proposed.

demands, despite claims which are made to the contrary.

Furthermore, such legislation really means the recognition of the dominant school as the official one.

In dealing with the matter of the refusal to allow for other treatments for employees of the Government...

Civil Service Rules Favored

The secondary resolution, dealing with the state...

"We favor legislation for the extension of Civil Service laws to all hospitals and institutions which are supported wholly or in part from public funds."

The last resolution falling into this general group was a resolution opposing all laws making vaccination compulsory.

The converse of the resolutions aimed against the domination of affairs by a single school of medicine, dubbed by the speakers "the medical trust," was a series of resolutions indorsing and recommending municipal, state and Federal provisions for the broad extension of medical care for the conservation of public health.

Health Measures Proposed

Among these was a resolution favoring local and National measures providing for examination of school children for the detection of abnormal and diseased conditions and for their remedy.

Especially important was the declaration that structural defects, postural defects, spinal curvatures and the like fall properly within the sphere of osteopathic examination and that this method should be employed in the schools for the purpose of detecting bad conditions and directing them to the attention of parents for remedy.

The Harrisonian Association of Oregon and it was recommended that similar measures be passed, tending to lessen the evils of the drug habit and to decrease the public use of dangerous medicines.

Prohibition Is Indorsed

Allied to this resolution was the declaration of the stand of the American Osteopathic Association as in favor of National-wide prohibition.

The association pledged its support to the Children's Bureau in its "baby saving campaign" and its agreement to obtain adequate birth registrations throughout the country. It also approved the legislation in the various states requiring the reporting of private diseases to boards of health and as other infectious diseases are reported.

The indorsement of the association was given and its support pledged to the Federal pure food movement, and the work of the bureau of chemistry in this line was strongly commended.

Women's Assistance Commended

The work of women's clubs, civic organizations, schools and colleges for furtherance of movements for the welfare of public health were indorsed and the support of the association and its members was pledged.

The peace resolution submitted by Dr. R. Kendrick Smith of Boston was remarkable inasmuch as it contained no direct reference to the term "peace."

"As conservators of human life," it read, "we wish to go on record as opposed to the destruction of human life as a means of settling international disputes."

Finally, the association renewed its pledge to remain loyal to the founder of osteopathy, Dr. A. T. Still, and to the principles discovered and enunciated by him.

Kansas City Is Selected

"And we assure him of our determination to possess a genuinely scientific spirit and a purpose to seek the truth and abide by its teachings and to make osteopathy transcendent in the healing art in the ages to come."

Just before the final adjournment of the convention, the announcement came from the board of trustees that Kansas City, Mo., had been settled upon as the place for holding the 1916 convention.

The competition for the convention was keen between Denver and Kansas City, and up to the last moment general opinion seemed to be about equally divided between the two cities.

Many Turned From Clinics

The principal address of the morning was that of J. Ivan Dufur, of Philadelphia, exhibiting, through the medium of motion pictures, an elaborate study of diagnosis of nervous diseases.

Throughout the forenoon the work in the clinics was continued and Drs. T. J. Roddy and W. V. Goodfellow, of Los Angeles, in the eye, ear, nose and throat section were followed to turn away a large number of cases at noon when the closing hour came.

committee would never have been able to explain. Dr. P. E. Moore, chairman of the entertainment committee, strayed into the banquet room just a short time before the convention was to be led in for its annual banquet.

INSPECTOR MORSE CHOSEN

Portland Postal Attaché to Take Charge of Boston District.

Stephen H. Morse, for the past year City Inspector here, but in this district for several years, and one of the best-liked postal inspectors ever stationed in Portland, has been transferred to Boston as inspector in charge of the Boston district. It became known yesterday.

In his new position, Mr. Morse will have jurisdiction over six New England states, with 40 inspectors under him. The place is regarded as one of the most important in the country.

Mr. Morse has been in the United States mail service for 25 years, and has been a postal inspector for 16 of them. He is considered one of the best men in the service.

Mr. Morse is now in Washington, where he was peremptorily summoned several days ago, after he had twice declined his promotion because he wanted to stay in the Pacific Northwest.

The convention had the stormiest session in its history, due to the activity of the United States in supplying the belligerents with war material.

Medical Element Overcome. Two factions presented themselves, and the radical element, which favored a strict censure of the policy of the United States on the shipping of arms to the allies, was overruled by the conservatives, who preferred suggestions to demands.

One of the unique events of the convention was the raising of the replica of the Iron Cross. Money for the benefit of German soldiers' orphans and widows was raised by auctioning off nails that were to be driven into the seven-foot wooden cross until no space was left where nails could be driven.

The honor of driving the first nail cost the man who won it $150. Dr. Hexamer in Portland the morning of August 16. Reservations have been made for him at the Imperial Hotel, and upon his arrival here he will be taken in charge by Portland German-Americans.

LARCH TRAIL TRIP MADE

Road Enthusiasts Go Over Proposed Light-Seeing Route.

Filled with enthusiasm over the scenic possibilities of the new trail to Larch Mountain, which penetrates into the heart of the Cascades, a party headed by Roadmaster Yeon returned to Portland Thursday night after a busy day climbing over the eight-day light-seeing route.

With Mr. Yeon were Amos Benson, County Commissioner, Holman, Holbrook, Representative C. N. McArthur, A. Rosenenthal and Forest Supervisor Sharrard.

The party was the first to traverse the new route, leaving the Columbia River Highway by the Benson trail, and returning by the Multnomah trail, a distance of 14 miles, which the party walked. The trails have just been completed and are described by members of the party as in perfect condition for travel.

"Magnificent" was the word used in describing the views gained on the trip. The scenery is declared unequalled in any of the nearby sections of the state that are accessible and the new trails are said to open up a region that is a wonderland, filled as it is with mountains, forests, canyons and dashing waterfalls.

The party reached the summit of Larch Mountain and signals were exchanged by heliograph with a party on the slopes of Mount Hood. Leaving Portland at 8 A. M. Thursday morning, the party returned to the city late that night.

Representative McArthur was loud in his praise of S. Benson for his efforts in behalf of the Larch Mountain trail.
