DOMESTIC SCIENCE BY LILIAN TINGLE.

PORTLAND, Or., Aug. 4.—I wonder if you could give me the recipe for prune cake. I bought one at Mrs. Jones's Exchange and it was delicious. It might be a layer cake, though it looks like a loaf. Will you let me know as soon as possible? I do not live in the city, but I am writing home soon. Thanking you in advance. MRS. M. G. S.

I AM sorry to disappoint you, but it is never possible for me to give "proprietary" recipes, as for the cake you mention. Possibly, as you live out of town, the maker of the cake might be willing to sell her recipe. If you write to her through the Woman's Exchange, I must confess that your description is rather vague for me to attempt a "guessing" recipe. However, following are some prune cake recipes which may be of use to others besides yourself and which you may read and try if any one of them seems to resemble what you have in mind. Prune cake No. 1.—One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, yolks of three eggs, whites of two eggs, one and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon each cloves, nutmeg, cinnamon, sifted-in flour, one teaspoon soda sifted with the flour, one-fourth cup sour milk, one tablespoon prune juice, one cup chopped steamed prunes. Mix like any butter cake. Bake in layers. Put together with white hot frosting. Decorate with walnuts. Chopped walnuts or a mixture of equal parts chopped walnuts and chopped soft prunes may be used mixed with the white icing, as filling between the layers. For variety 12 marshmallows, cut up with scissors into small pieces, may be beaten into the icing with the egg whites. Use two egg whites to one and one-fourth cups sugar, boiled with one-half cup water to about 24 degrees Fahrenheit, or to the "soft ball" degree. Pour the syrup slowly on the stiff whites and beat to "spreading" consistency. Prune sauce cake.—Three cups smooth unsweetened prune pulp, as thick as ordinary apple sauce, two cups sugar, one cup butter, four cups flour, two level teaspoons soda, two level tea-spoons baking powder, one teaspoon cloves, two teaspoons cinnamon. Boil the prune pulp, sugar and butter five minutes. Let cool, then beat in the flour, sifted with the spices, soda and baking powder. Beat up one minute. Bake in a large loaf or in layers. One-half the amount makes a good cake. Frost with white frosting. Decorate with nuts. Can be made, as above, without egg or one or two eggs may be beaten in just before the flour. Prune nut cake.—One-half cup butter, one cup sugar, one-half cup milk, one-half cup cornstarch, one cup flour, two level teaspoons baking powder, three eggs whites, one-fourth teaspoon almond or pistachio flavoring. Mix in the ordinary way for butter cakes, bake in a loaf. Cut in half, crossways, fill with one-half cup white frosting, made as in No. 1, mixed with eight steamed or soaked stoned and cut-up prunes, mixed with one-fourth to one-third cup chopped walnut meats. Cover with white frosting and decorate with walnut meats. Danish prune cake (Mrs. H. M. D. Rockaway Beach, Or.)—One cup of strained prune juice, one cup of stewed prunes, one cup of white sugar, three eggs of sifted flour, three eggs (yolks only), five tablespoons of melted butter, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and nutmeg. Stone and wash prunes fine. Put all together before stirring at all. Sift soda, baking powder and spices with flour. Add cup of prune juice, beat together, but stir as little as possible. Bake in layers. Fill with whipped cream flavored with mocha extract.

Portland Girl Home to Rest From War Adventures. Miss Beatrice Young Arrives Safely After Escape From Battle-Ridden Country and Espionage Experiences.

BY EDITH KNIGHT HOLMES. HOW a clever Portland girl lived in Brussels for several months after the beginning of the war, how she made her escape to England after being a target for the experts in the espionage systems on the continent and finally reached New York, where she was employed by the Secretary of State for Belgium and the Belgian Consul-General—handling much of the diplomatic correspondence—is revealed in the interesting story of the adventures of Miss Beatrice Young. Now Miss Young has just returned to Portland after an absence of more than three years. During the last months in which she was working in New York City for L. De Sadeleur, the Secretary of State for Belgium, and Pierre Mall, the Belgian Consul, she was constantly in touch with diplomatic affairs, translating and writing letters and documents that went between the Belgian office and those of the various nations. She knows more about the war probably than any other woman in America. Miss Young is an expert linguist and can take dictation in French, German —and Sanatogen brings, too, a new Joy in living! FOR with Sanatogen there comes into the flagging system a new elasticity—a new vigor that stirs up the mind to its old-time activity, to its old-time readiness to do and to accomplish—a new endurance, bodily as well as mental—and, withal, a general improvement in one's health that makes it a joy just to be alive. Such has been the experience, freely expressed in writing, of men and women in every walk of life. And if the carefully recorded experience of the medical profession counts for anything then we know that this effect of Sanatogen is the natural result of its ability to nourish and fortify—naturally and persistently, the starved cells, the impoverished blood that are the cause of nervous breakdowns. Read what Col. Henry Waterson, the famous editor writes: "I feel that I owe it to truth to state that I have made a thorough trial of Sanatogen and that I have found it most efficacious and beneficial. I do not think I have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerves."

and other languages as easily as can the ordinary expert in English. "How did you get out of Belgium?" I asked. "Just sneaked out," was her reply. She had been in the university in Paris for a year and had studied in another university in Brussels for two years more, had received her many degrees, all except the "Ph.D." which she was ambitious to gain and then the war came and upset everything. She got a diploma but that Ph.D. is still left behind with Miss Young's trunks and books and other possessions. After the beginning of the conflict, there came a great demand for someone to take stenographic reports in French. It was up to the American girl and she went to work but of course there was no money. The fare too was plain, brown bread, soup at that, little meat and no fancy dishes. "The American Ambassador, Mr. Whitlock, bought up some meat and gave the people of Brussels a chance to get some; otherwise the Germans would have had it all," Miss Young said. The American girl was frequently mistaken for a spy. If she spoke German, the French thought she was German and when she spoke French it was the other way round. An American woman, a friend of hers, who had married a German count, befriended her and got her some passports that entitled her to leave Belgium by auto or railway. "As neither was running, my passport was a joke and I decided I must escape. An American friend went out of the city in a private limousine with some peasant lads, who finally piloted us to Ghent. But we had to sneak. We hid in barns while the soldiers passed and all the time the cannonading was going on. Why, I was so used to bombs and cannons that I actually missed them when I got away. My head is full of war but out here I hope to rest and be a private citizen of a peaceful country," said Miss Young. "I saw poor little children and hungry, unhappy women everywhere and I longed so to help them, but had so little money myself I dare not give to them. My travelers' checks were of no use. "From Ghent to Ostend we went by train. The latter place we reached just after it had been bombed and the town was in chaos. It was awful. We took the boat to Folkestone, England, traveling slowly and cautiously with life boats ready to lower. At last the tension was over and we reached England to help them, but had so little money myself I dare not give to them. My travelers' checks were of no use. "From Ghent to Ostend we went by train.
