

"DOLLAR DAY" SET FOR SEPTEMBER 23

Chamber Invites Stores to Offer Special Bargains to Buyers for Day.

COMMITTEES AT WORK

Charles F. Berg Is Named General Chairman, and Assistants Are Assigned to Particular Tasks.

A gigantic demonstration of what a dollar will go in purchasing merchandise will be given in Portland next month.

Portland merchants have ordered and are receiving their new stocks. They are enormous stocks, and it is probable that these merchants owe a sum of money much larger than the debt of Portland.

Official pennants will be placed in the windows and before the stores participating.

This will be the first "Dollar Day" ever held in Portland. Charles F. Berg was elected general chairman of the Dollar Day event and immediately appointed the following committees.

lemen, I have done my duty. It's up to you, it's up to you."

As Mr. Pipes finished, Mrs. Menefee, who has been a constant attendant at the trial, was weeping softly, and there was a stillness through the courtroom.

In beginning his closing argument, United States Attorney Reames said he had never listened to a more eloquent or masterful argument than that of Mr. Pipes.

"But in the trial of every prisoner," he went on, "it is always said to every jury that the principal suffering caused by a conviction will fall on those who are not to blame. If I am a prosecuting attorney, had to take that into consideration, then there would never be a case brought before a jury for prosecution. Because, in every trial, gentlemen, the burden does fall, must fall, on the innocent ones who are not to blame."

"Etrier in his argument, Mr. Pipes had referred satirically to the 'prosecuting frame of mind' of the United States Attorney, and had said that he and the Government special agents 'are as necessary as any other trained animals, or the quarry will escape.'"

Mr. Reames answers Criticisms. "Attorney Dobson, for Mr. Lemon, said the United States Attorney was staging a great play in this trial, and Mr. Pipes himself said I was conducting a sort of trained animal show."

"It has been said that I have brought a few farmers and a few sheepmen here to gain your sympathy. But didn't Mr. Lemon say in the company of his letters to salesmen, 'Stick to the farmers' and didn't Frank Menefee write and say that the company was being confined to the city and small towns. Who brought these farmers and these sheepmen into this case before I ever heard of them?"

"If I have staged a drama here, who has furnished the actors? who has written the lines of the play? and who has fixed the price of admission to the theater?"

"I have been accused of having been unfair. Why, the average price paid by each stockholder in the company was $500. If I had wanted to be unfair, I'd have left out the farmers and the sheepmen who put in big sums, and brought here before you the small farmers on the streets and the girls in the factories who were induced to put their money into stock of this company."

More Letters Read. "But I won't say much about this charge of unfairness, because Mr. Lemon's attorney could have put in the time he took to talk about my unfairness so much better in explaining some of the letters and telegrams no one seems to want to read except the Government."

He reads to the jury many of these letters and telegrams. In one, dated September 27, 1911, Lemon told a salesman a "closing" letter that only 2000 more shares would be sold, at a price to net $35,000.

"The difference between what he promised the company would sell and what it did sell was just $34,000," said Mr. Reames. "Why, they paid out $55,000 in commissions alone. What's the use of taking up the precious moments with abuse of the United States Attorney's office when there's so much in the record to answer?"

Robert F. Masuire, attorney for O. E. Gornart, argued in the morning. He declared emphatically that Mr. Gornart was not an official of the company, that he had no knowledge and no way of obtaining knowledge as to its assets and the condition of its patents, and that he acted in good faith on information given him by his superiors.
