Last-Day Catch is Not Heavy, but Fish
Are of Geed Quality; Fall Work

Begins September 10.

ASTORIA, Or., Aug. 25.—(Special.)—
The Spring fishing season on the Columbia River closed at noon today. As the crest of the flood tide was on the traps were allowed to drop their aprons and were then given until tomorrow to lift the pots and remove the fish. The catch last night and today was not heavy, aithough some of the fishermen made fairly good hauls.

There are great schools of fish outside, however, and the trollers are meeting with aplendid luck. The trollers will continue operations during the closed season. The fish which they are getting are chinooks and sockeys, with a few silversides.

The chinooks delivered this morning were sound and firm, more like the July variety, than those usually taken the latter part of August, and all will go
