

STREET HATS MUST GO IN 2 MORE DAYS

Fashion Decrees All Men Are to Don New Fall Head-pieces September 1.

STYLES OF PAST RETURN

Gray Fedoras and Alpines Decorated With Black Bands, Like Fathers Wore Long Ago, Are Correct This Season.

BY DEAN O'CONNOR

There's a man with a hat on his head who never in his life had any more than a bowler hat. He is the man who is the fashion.

Already the windows of the haberdasher are filled with appropriate reminders that there is only one day left in which the men of Portland may take delight in their season-scared summer hats.

On the morning of September 1 everything except a Fall or Winter headpiece will be completely obsolete.

May 1 has been set for that day for several seasons. This year it was decided that if there could be a definite day set in which men should put on their summer hats, there should be also an equally definite day on which they should take them off again.

The man, however, who called his hat the last year's derby, or stored his hat in a closet in the attic, or even hid it in a trunk, is not so lucky.

Conservative colors are the rule this year," says M. Siegel, "and the hats with bright, ornate bands or ribbons, and color schemes will be entirely out of place.

"Quiet colors and no freak shapes are the main points about the hat of the present fall season."

Black-Banded Gray Correct. The light gray Fedoras or Alpines hat with a black band, which has been out of style for 24 years, comes back this year.

The dress hats will tend toward the softer, pet-topper of the Paris hat, but will not be apparent.

Fancy devices, lined with silk like high-priced cuffers, will be apparent, at prices ranging anywhere up to $10.

And today and tomorrow are all the time they are left in which to pick his hat out, for on Wednesday something has got to take the place of his straw—unless this weather keeps up.

Investigator Declared to Have Tried to Transfer 'Prejudices of Nation Against Men of Wealth.'

DENVER, Aug. 30.—Governor George A. Carlson has issued a prepared statement charging that Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations, had spread "mendacious statements" regarding the political and industrial conditions in Colorado.

"Mr. Walsh, with vicious and subtle cunning, is impugning the domination of business interests and the overwhelming majority of Colorado's citizens," read the Governor's statement.

"By painting a mountain and a sensationalist, he (Walsh) did not tell the truth, because the truth concerning Colorado is not what he says it is. He made a deliberate and deliberate decision to distort the facts and to mislead the public."

STOCKS OF TOYS AMPLE

PORTLAND STORES NOT AFFECTED BY BRITISH PROHIBITION.

Fear That German-Made Goods Would Be Stopped Prompts Buyers to Double Their Purchases.

Don't worry, kids. You'll get your toys just the same this Christmas as last, even if the British don't let the Germans ship over here the attacks and tanks and dolls of drums, horns, jumping jacks, dolls, rickshaws, and soldiers, tin whistles, jack straws, and woolly lambs, hobby horses, elephants and Teddy Bears they have made for you.

Most of the toys come from Germany, the Germans make them. After the war started, American stores were afraid they couldn't get any more toys if they didn't have a good stock on hand.

The British let them come through their blockade, so that they would have their share of the toys.

And today and tomorrow are all the time they are left in which to pick his hat out, for on Wednesday something has got to take the place of his straw—unless this weather keeps up.
