Mrs. James G. Gauld, with whom Mrs. Kent is visiting, also honored her with a luncheon yesterday. They have been friends for many years, Many other social compliments will be paid the distinguished visitor.

Mrs. Harold Purington Brown was the honored guest for the pretty bridge party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. J. J. Valentine. Mrs. Brown is visiting Mrs. Gwen Summers and is a prominent matron of Chicago. Three tables were arranged for cards and the hostess was assisted by Mrs. Summers. Later in the afternoon additional guests called for tea to greet the visitor, who made many friends here four years ago, when she acted as matron of honor at the Summers-Morgan wedding.

Mrs. Valentine's residence was aglow with graceful clusters of vari-colored cosmos, making an effective foil for the Summer-like frocks of the guests.

The Mill Boy and the Gnome. 1 OMMY eat on top of a pile of planks and listened to the dripping water of pestering thieves, and I will not do any work for you."

The gnome said not a word, but turned his donkey and riding down the road a bit, alighted and eat under a tree to cat a bit of lunch. Presently the miller was called away from home and Tommy was left in charge of the mill. Without waiting a moment he ran to where the gnome sat and told him to bring his sack of grain back and let it be ground. So the gnome came, and in a few moments the great wheel was grinding the corn into fine meal. In another moment the glad gnome was trotting home happy on his donkey.

The next morning a strange thins The next morning a strange thing happened—there was not a drop of water coming down the stream to turn the wheel. The miller was speechless with astonishment and could do nothing but wring his hands in despair. Every day the miller got poorer and more unhappy, for his machinery stood idle and there was no work done. His ciothing grew shabby and his table had on it little to eat. Tommy the lad had an idea, but said nothing to the miller what he thought.

"If I can make the water flow again as it did before," said Tommy at last,

"will you give me a half interest in the mill?"

"Certainly; certainly," said the poor

After dinner Tommy sat out for the mountains. He knew the gnomes lived up there among the rocks, and guessed that the tiny men had something to do with the water being gone. At sunset the lad found himself in a pretty hollow within a wall of high rocks, and just before him lay the gnome whom he had seen at the mill, asleep. Tommy woke the little man up.

"Our mill race has gone dry," explained the boy, "and there is nothing with which to turn the wheel, I cannot grind and will soon have nothing on which to live."

Up the mountain Tommy followed the gnome till they stood on the bank of a stream flowing swiftly down the other way. It had been dammed with stones and sand from running down to the miller's place, and was thus sent down in another direction. Tommy and the gnome set to work, and in a few moments the water was rushins. down its old course to the mill.

"Fill your pockets full of this sand and look at it in the morning," said the gnome. "And remember, in most cases, as in this, it pays to be kind. Mean people generally meet what they give out to others. Goodbye; I will call next year to see how you are getting on," and with this the little man was gone.

These friends camped there at an average cost for tent and food of $5 per week per person. They had one of the most delightful vacations they have ever experienced, gained in weight, and enjoyed leisureiy and to the full, some of the most beautiful scenery the world has to offer.

It would be almost, if not quite impossible, to Secure board at the most indifferent resort for this price. The accommodations one would get would be apt to be neither restful nor beneficial. Yet here one had comfort, health, nourishing food, beauty wherever the eye looked, for this almost nominal cost. And in addition to the delightful trail trips to the various points of interest, and the fun and solility of camp-fires at night, there was for those who cared for it, dancing three times a week in the Government payllion, free moving pictures, and frequently interesting services and lectures at the hotel camps.

Of course, in many parts of the country, camping is not made so easy. Nor has it the environment the Yosemite offers and which adds so much to its delights. But the West is full of such offers and for such "vacationing" was stronger in the East, the supply would be provided.

But at any rate, for those who want an inexpensive and delightful vacation or who want to see the Yosemite at small cost, here is the actual experience of those who achieved both.

Dear Friends:

I guess you've heard and noticed a good deal about hotel dignity. Well, it seems to be a hotel's nature to be dignified. They seem to think it is beneath their dignity to descend into the kitchen and discuss food, or to the laundry and discuss cleanliness, or to a guest chamber and discuss ventilation. I'm here to explode all that tommyrot. I propose to uncover secrets that were never before told about a big hotel and the life that people lead therein.
