

JURY LOCKED UP IN MORAL SQUAD CASE

Evidence in $20,000 Suit by Married Couple Considered Since 3 o'Clock.

POLICE PLAYED BITTERLY

W. H. Warren Declared to Be 'Power Behind Throne' and Director of Raids—Warrant Service Is Vital Issue, Says Court.

Instructed to bring in a sealed verdict if they reached a conclusion in the $20,000 damage suit brought by Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ingersoll against W. H. Warren, private secretary to Mayor Albee, and three members of the police "moral squad," the jury was still locked up at a late hour last night after considering the evidence since 3 P. M. yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingersoll were arrested on "John Doe" warrants in a raid on the Minkook Hotel last February. W. F. Hume, attorney for the Ingersolls, bitterly flayed the "moral squad" and the policy of the city administration in raising money for the Ingersolls. Stanley Myers, Deputy City Attorney, made little attempt to answer the bitter charges made by Mr. Hume in his argument.

Officers Declared Within Law. He contended himself with a brief summary of the case, a few quotations from alleged "wild statements" in Mr. Hume's opening argument, and declared that the officers were acting clearly within the law when they made the arrests on "John Doe" warrants in the Minkook Hotel.

Mr. Hume, declaring that Mr. Warren was the real "power behind the throne" in the city, said that the "moral squad" was a "good man, filled with good intentions, in which respect he resembles hell. Mr. Warren, the real power in that office, is filled with bad intentions, in which respect he resembles hell. The difference is that the Mayor does not carry out his good intentions and Mr. Warren does carry out his bad intentions."

Hotel Is Defended. Some of the jurors laughed when Mr. Hume read the newspaper clipping. "Then, then," shouted Mr. Hume, "is the man who sent for Mr. Miller, owner of the Minkook Hotel, and gave him a week in which to clean it out, with the alternative that it would be raided and his business ruined if he did not. Mr. Hume referred to the hotels which had been raided as "white republics" which represented investments of thousands of dollars."

"This hotel is no worse than any other hotel in the city," he declared. "These unfortunate women have been driven from place to place until they were scattered and sought refuge in the best and the worst hotels in Portland."

Protection for Wise Charge. He told the story of ex-Patrolman Wise, once a member of the "moral squad," and who is one of the defendants in this suit. Wise disappeared from Portland soon after the Minkook raid, and it was later learned that he ran away with Mrs. Gooding, whose husband Wise and Lieutenant Harms had convicted of white slavery. Mr. Hume charged that Lieutenant Harms had shielded Wise from prosecution for white slavery himself.

Whether or not Lieutenant Harms, Patrolman Martin and ex-Patrolman Wise had the warrants with them and actually served them on Mr. and Mrs. Ingersoll, is the chief question to be decided by the jury, according to Judge Gantenbein's instructions. He had ruled that the "John Doe" warrants signed with Municipal Judge Stevenson's rubber stamp were valid warrants as far as the officers who served them were concerned.

Warrant Service Is Served. The officers had the warrants with them and actually served them, then the Ingersolls had no alternative but to submit to the arrest and the officers were not liable, if, however, the officers did not have the warrants with them or did not serve them they are liable for damages for false arrest.

The officers all testified that they had the warrants with them and that Lieutenant Harms read the "John Doe" warrant to Mr. Ingersoll. The Ingersolls said they did not see a warrant, but that one of the officers said they had "John Doe" warrants, whereupon Mr. Ingersoll said: "That's not my name."

Mr. Hume declared in his argument that the warrants, written on a typewriter, some of them carbon copies, and stamped with a rubber stamp, might easily have been made up since the beginning of the suit and prepared for the purpose.

All day yesterday the courtroom was packed. SHERIFF'S JURY DECIDES Lumber Company Wins Case at Eugene, With Deputy Presiding.

erty damage as was done in earlier announcements of the kind. The German War Office was almost as reticent, saying in its official statement that bombs were dropped on docks and other port establishments in London and vicinity and that "the effect" was very satisfactory.

Whether or not extensive damage is done to property in the center of the city, it is apparent that London was deeply stirred by the attack. It may be inferred that the bombardment was of so serious nature as to arouse fears on the part of the Americans in London that their friends in this country would be alarmed for their safety.

All Americans Reported Safe. The censor passed a dispatch saying that there were no Americans among the dead or wounded, according to reports made by the American embassy and the American consulate. A cablegram from the London office of the Chicago Daily News said that all there were safe. Carefully worded articles in London newspapers conveyed a similar intimation.

ITALIANS AT SWISS LINE

PREPARATION FOR FRENCH AGGRESSION CHARGED.

Move Is Made Simultaneously With Belligerent Accusation of German Influence, Says Berlin Agency.

BERLIN, by wireless to Saville, N. Y., Sept. 9.—According to reliable private information, says the Overseas News Agency today, "considerable forces of Italian troops have been shifted from the Austrian frontier to the southwestern frontier of Switzerland. The move has attracted the attention of the Swiss military authorities, especially in connection with the fact that the French have concentrated troops on the Swiss northwestern frontier."

"The Italian measure," continues the news agency, "might be intended as a demonstration that the Swiss forces could be hemmed in in case a violation of Swiss territory in the northwest was attempted. The measures appear especially significant in the light of the simultaneous appearance in British newspapers of an accusation that the Swiss people were submitting to anti-British influences and that German agents were trying to drag Switzerland into the war by violating Swiss neutrality."

"They suggest also that the Swiss government, under the pressure of an ultimatum from the German forces, might order a withdrawal of the Swiss militia to the inner line of defenses, leaving the way clear for an army to march through and invade France."

Insinuations such as these, the Overseas News Agency declares, are in its view thrown out to prepare the way for French aggression.

F-4 BODIES SENT HOME

FOUR KNOWN DEAD, NINE UNIDENTIFIED, IN EIGHT CASKETS.

Coast Artillery Acts as Escort as Honorary and Funeral Ship Sails at Once for San Francisco.

HONOLULU, Sept. 9.—The dead of the submarine F-4, the eight caskets draped with the flag they honored, were placed aboard the United States steamer Supply today to be sent home. The service that marked the funeral at the naval station here of the 13 fragmentary bodies recovered from the bulk of the submarine that went down outside of the harbor with its crew of 21 men, commanded by Lieutenant Louis Alfred Ede, on March 25.

As the funeral cortege, escorted by three Coast Artillery companies and a military band, moved through the streets with the eight caskets, to the muffled beat of drums, crowds stood by the sidewalks and the flags over the city sagged at half mast.

The four identified bodies taken from the F-4, those of George T. Ashcroft, Ivan L. Mahan, Charles H. Wells and Frank N. Herzog, were placed in separate coffins. The unidentified were sealed in four others.

The identified dead will be sent to their relatives; the others to the Arlington National Cemetery at Arlington, Va. The Supply left today for San Francisco.

GERMANS SAY GAIN BIG

FRENCH LINE PENETRATED ON FRONT OF MORE THAN MILE.

Advance of From 300 to 500 Meters Made in Argonne and More Than 1200 Prisoners Are Captured.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The French official report today says there was violent fighting last night in the Argonne region. The Germans attacked the French line with great ferocity, but with one exception these lines everywhere held fast. The French took some prisoners and a machine gun, says the Paris account.

The German War Office announces the affair as an "important victory," and says that French positions over a front of two kilometers (1 1/2 miles) and 300 to 500 meters deep, were captured. The official report from Berlin says: "In the Argonne, northeast of Vienna, the German Westphalian and Lotharing regiments began yesterday an attack, which was supported effectively by artillery. The infantry charged and took possession of positions of great importance at several points of support, over a front of more than two kilometers and from 300 to 500 meters deep. We captured 38 officers, 1199 men, 48 machine guns, 64 mine throwers and one cannon."

EXEMPTS TO BE EXAMINED Germans Say New Law Does Not Increase Army Age Limit. BERLIN, Sept. 9, by wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.—Among the items given out today by the Overseas News Agency for transmission abroad was the following: "Reports that a bill had been passed by the Reichstag for an increase in the age limit for army service are incorrect. The Reichstag bill orders medical reinspection of persons hitherto exempted from service for various shortcomings."

BRITAIN NOT READY TO CONSIDER PEACE

Even With United States as Mediator, Proposals Would Have Little Chance.

STIPULATIONS INSISTED ON

Full Concurrence of Allies Would Be Necessary, Also Destruction of Military Domination of Prussia Demanded.

(Special cable to the New York World, Copyright, 1915, by the Press Publishing Company. Published by arrangement.) LONDON, Sept. 9.—Peace proposals, even though they come through the United States as intermediaries, have absolutely no better chance in Great Britain today than they had six months or even a year ago. That is the universal opinion in official circles here.

Although no member of the government would be quoted in a discussion of the possibility of peace terms, one responsible official, in a position to speak with authority, gave the World correspondent a statement of Great Britain's position. In the first place, he denied explicitly and categorically that peace rumors have any foundation in any action on the part of the British government or in any statement from responsible sources.

Pact With Allies Binding. "Great Britain undoubtedly would listen courteously to the United States should that power act as a peace intermediary, but Great Britain is absolutely bound not to enter into peace negotiations without the full concurrence of her allies, and there is no chance of our allies lending a sympathetic ear to peace proposals until certain stipulations have been met."

"These stipulations were set forth by Prime Minister Asquith in his Guildhall speech on November 9, 1914. In this speech the Premier declared that Britain would not make peace until Belgium had regained all and more than she had sacrificed; until France is secured adequately against future aggression; until the rights of the small nations in Europe are protected; until a secure foundation and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed."

Conference Not Even Hinted At. The officially inspired interview given the World correspondent also made it clear that there had been no hint of a conference of the allies to discuss peace terms in any quarter. "Insinuations such as these, the Overseas News Agency declares, are in its view thrown out to prepare the way for French aggression."

Even should Germany show a disposition to meet Great Britain on the ground proposed by Mr. Asquith, the World correspondent gathered from this interview and from other authoritative sources, Great Britain would consider herself bound to move until she had consulted with her allies. For example, the security of France must be regarded on France's terms and according to France's ideas of what is necessary for her safety, and not on England's.

Regarding Germany's withdrawal of the illegal aspects of her submarine campaign, the British position is that this need not be followed by a relaxation of the blockade of Germany, because Great Britain is yet to be convinced that her blockade is illegal.

Russia Standfast as Ever. Furthermore, Russia, despite her recent reverses, is standfast as ever, according to a thorough British conviction. "Germany has made absolutely no headway in Russia for a separate peace," the official already quoted said. "Officials here decline to discuss Cardinal Gibbons' peace mission to President Wilson until more is known regarding the Cardinal's message and the resulting conference, and they take the position that Germany's supposed peace terms, recently put forward concerning freedom of the seas, as well as for Poland and equal rights for the Jews are too vague and too objectionable to be put forward for effect to be worth consideration."

WILSON WARY OF EXCUSES

latter sought to ram the submarine, "the latter thus acting in accordance with the "new" policy. "There is no apology of any kind in the note received today by Secretary Lansing from Ambassador Gerard. The note regrets the loss of American life, refers to the instructions issued for the protection of liners and proposes that the questions of reparation and compensation for the Americans sacrificed be referred to The Hague.

The Administration is in a quandary. It notified Germany that the destruction of another liner would constitute a "deliberately unfriendly act." The torpedoing of the Arabic was the German answer to this declaration. The German government was permitted to explain, and now to defend the destruction of that vessel.

Explanation Is Not Satisfactory. Both the explanation and the defense are unsatisfactory. "But can the Administration say to Germany that the facts as it has stated them are not correct, and its assurances as to its future conduct are not worth the paper they are written on? So far as the facts are concerned, this Government is certain of their character, not from British sources, but from American officials. The reports made by the latter establish that the Arabic, being a vessel sinking, turned to rescue the survivors. On this ground of mercy the liner was torpedoed.

It is definitely established that the Administration is not dignified at this moment to break off relations with Germany. The note received this morning will be answered, probably in this fashion: "The United States cannot believe, in view of the reports it has received, that the Arabic intended to ram the submarine, but it fully expects that no other incident shall occur in which doubt may creep and that German submarine commanders will carry out scrupulously the spirit and the letter of the German assurances regarding the security of liners from attack without warning."

Next Note to Be Final. This will be the final note sent to Germany on the submarine question. To write others merely would confirm the weakness of the United States and its willingness to accept any excuse to avoid action.

The Administration officials are quoting the statement of Lincoln that you "can't fool all of the people all of the time." They have been looking up the records of German excuses and they find: The liner Lusitania was sunk because she carried concealed guns and munitions. The American steamer Gulfight was attacked because it was believed she was under convoy.

The steamer Nebraskan was attacked because it was believed that she was an English vessel. The American ship William H. Frye was sunk because she had foodstuffs intended for England in her hold and because of the fear of the approach of English men-of-war.

The Arabic was sunk because the German submarine commander "thought" the steamer intended to ram his boat. If the Arabic had been sunk by a surface marine—and not by a mine, as officially asserted by Berlin—the defense undoubtedly will be that she was armed with six-inch guns.

It is evident that a variety of excuses can be offered by the German government. But no more will be received. The President has made up his mind on that point.

The communication adds that the Russian captures since September 2 on the Sereth front total 333 officers and nearly 17,000 men and a great quantity of guns.

NOTED CHEMIST SUGGESTS SIMPLE HAIR REMEDY

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Famed Pure Food and Drug Expert, Has Own Idea of Tonic for Hair and Scalp. In a report based on an analysis of many remedies and tonics extensively advertised for the hair and scalp, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, noted chemist and former chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, has suggested, as containing the general stimulative principles, a simple formula for a tonic for the hair and scalp.

Dr. Wiley states that he is not going into the hair tonic business, but the active principles of his formula have been compounded in the convenient form of a powder by the Esbancott Chemical Laboratories, of this city, who have undertaken its local distribution to those who may be interested.

Thousands who are troubled with dandruff, who are losing their hair, or have scalp trouble, will welcome this opportunity to try a tonic made after Dr. Wiley's formula. A nominal charge of one dollar is being made by the Esbancott Laboratories for a sufficient quantity of the powder to make sixteen ounces or a pint of tonic, and may be obtained by mail by addressing them at Portland, Oregon.
