

SCOTT'S REAL SCOTTISH IN CLEVER LYRIC ACT

Interesting Tale Told of How Ability Becomes Recognized and Latter Commercialized and How Audiences Are Mesmerized.

BY LEONE CASS BAER.

CRISPLY humorous, brightly laughable, just the sort of thing needed in vaudeville is the little act offered by the two Scotts, who launched their ship on the sea of entertainment last week at the Lyric.

The two Scotts, or the Scotts, as they prefer to be called, are themselves, are Portland folk who don't believe in hiding whatever light one has under the proverbial bushel as long as one can receive money for it. For years W. K. Scott has sung his gay Scotch ballads and told Scotch stories and danced the bare-kneed hula at divers meetings of the Scotts. And Mrs. Scott, though Scottish only by marriage, fell merrily into entertaining mood when the bagpipes yodeled. All this, mind you, for the sheer fun of it. Then, one day, the commercial instinct which bites all of us at some time or another, bit the two Scotts, simultaneously. They would sell their singing address. And in the meantime—the explanation—story lines on the motion picture screen say—in the meantime, Lyn Udall had been dropped into fame considerably, once for writing "Just as the Sun Went Down," again for "The One Girl," and anon for "Stay in Your Own Back Yard," not forgetting his collaboration with Dean Collins in "My Red Cross Girl." Lyn Udall has had a sketch, his brother Larry Keating (for Lyn Udall is none other than Jack Keating) and a theater and could book the time and the inclination.

So they all got together and worked out a little act. They called it "The Front," but it held none of the woes and wallings of ordinary war plays. It was just a sweet, simple story of a Highland lassie who meets her brother after long years of separation. She is on her way as a Red Cross girl, and he is going as a soldier, each for their "ain country." They exchange Harrylauderish observations and carry on "something scandalous" in a Quaker Oats atmosphere. Mr. Scott appears as a Gordon Highlander, with all the pep and lancing ornaments of the tartan, and the other as a Red Cross nurse with white gown and cap. She sings a sweet, clear soprano "Comin' Thru the Rye" and "My Red Cross Girl," and after the strike she incorporates the piano with a personal punch the whistler husband sings.

And how that "Red Cross" mon' in the abbreviated skirt can sing! Rolls in r-rs richly and takes a nip of the wee craythur! He sings topical and topical Scotch ballads, and his audience howls at the sterner tale. Then, as a wind-up for the clean little act, the two depart in a burst of patriotic melody. In "We're With You, Uncle Sammy, to a Man" Lyn Udall has written what must prove one of the timely, tender and most musical songs of a day. The melody is a Scotch air, a patriotic air—and there's a lovely run of "Yankee Doodle" in one line. The nature of the ballad is told in its title, and the two Scotts stop it off and sing it with vigor and vim. The act probably will reach the big-time in a short time.

is kept the same as the temperature of the body, for brain fatigue is described by W. Earl Flynn, health advocate, who is conducting the Flynn Health Chautauque at the Lyric street theater. Mr. Flynn told his audience Saturday night that instead of the brain that makes the muscles tire, it is the muscles that make the brain tired, and that consequently when one is tired the other is tired.

"If a mental case is aggravated," said Mr. Flynn, "eat lightly for a day or two of fruit and vegetables. Do not take any stimulants for brain or nerve fatigue because fruit and vegetables, particularly apples, will be better stimulants. The importance of bathing to relieve mental fatigue was also touched upon by Mr. Flynn as essential to brain fatigue cure.

"The skin is our information bureau," he said, "and it is the only knowledge of our physical condition comes. The five gateways of knowledge are all parts of the skin, sight, hearing, taste, smell, touch. The skin, organs, or life, itself, is influenced for good or ill by the skin. Our strength is affected by the application of hot and cold to the skin. An experiment to test this was tried with the following results: A man's strength was tested before bath, his lift was 500 pounds. He was put in hot water for 30 minutes; the test again was tried, and he could lift only 250 pounds. He was then put in cold water for two minutes and again put to the test, and he could lift 750 pounds.

Mr. Flynn's subject last night was "Cause and Cure of That Tired Feeling and the Blues."

YOM KIPPUR IS OBSERVED

Fasting Accompanied Abstinence From Work and Pleasure.

Yom Kippur, or the day of atonement, was observed at the Lyric street theater last night by a group of Jewish worshippers.

At the Temple Beth Israel Rabbi Joseph B. Wise delivered an address on the subject of the Jewish holiday.

The conclusion of the Jewish holiday will be marked by the celebration of the feast of the tabernacle. This festival is one of the prettiest of the Jewish ceremonies.

VILLA EVACUATES TORREON

Forces Unable to Obtain Supplies With Which to Resist.

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 19.—Torreón has been evacuated by the forces of General Villa, according to official advice received here today.

Villa and his staff left on the last train early today for Chihuahua City.

Inability of the Villa forces to obtain supplies with which to advance against General Obregon's Carranza forces made the position untenable.

Plans for splitting the Villa army into small bands for the purpose of raiding Obregon's lines of communication were repudiated by the Villa forces who arrived today by the hundreds.

MR. GRIFFITH'S CAR TAGGED

Traction Official Leaves Auto in Front of Electric Building.

Franklin T. Griffith, president of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, left an automobile standing in front of the entrance to the Electric building late Saturday night. When he came to the car, he found a tag pinned to the door handle.

Wright had tagged the car for blocking a city ordinance by blocking the street in front of the building.

"I guess I'd have kicked if it had been a 'G' class machine," said Mr. Griffith. No charge was placed against him, since it was his first offense.

DROP IN ROLL LAID TO FEE

University of Washington Attributes Decrease of 61 to Tuition.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 19.—A decrease of 61 in the number of students registered in the first week of enrollment at the University of Washington compared with last year is attributed to the imposition of tuition fees by the legislature.

The enrollment at the University last night stood at 3,416. Collection of the fee for the week ending last night amounted to $25,370. Last year they were $30,592.

Prowler Is Arrested.

With 50 feet of rope in his pocket, Albert Coop, a liverman in Lenta, was found prowling around two calves tied near the home of E. A. Reynolds, also of Lenta, and was arrested by Patrolman Reid to be held for investigation.

The officer says Coop explained his presence by saying that he intended to buy the calves after he had looked them over. Mr. Reynolds says Coop never mentioned his intention before.

Coop had a saddle horse tied near the scene of his arrest.

Poverty Leads to Divorce.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—"To marry a man that has not a goodly income is an economic error on the part of any woman," said the philosophy to which Mrs. Florence Burr gave expression, according to Roy E. Burr, in a suit for divorce filed in Circuit Court. He says they were married in 1911, and shortly thereafter Mrs. Burr made it plain she was far from satisfied on a financial basis, and later deserted him.

CHARGE TO LIQUOR INTERESTS

Bay State ex-Governor Says Conspiracy Is on Foot to Aid Teuton Allies.

Foss Declares ex-Secretary Went to Boston to Offset Disclosures That Germans Planned to Tie Up Shipping.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—(Special).—Ex-Governor Foss, in a letter to Secretary Lansing Saturday, attacked the combined liquor interests of the United States, charging them with aiding a conspiracy to subvert the institutions of this country for their Teutonic connections.

His charges also described William Jennings Bryan as coming to Boston at the psychological moment to offset recent exposures which showed Boston as a hotbed of German propaganda and the place where a general strike and tie-up of the shipping interests of the country was planned. Mr. Foss says in part:

"There is, however, one manifestation of this movement with reference to which I desire to make my position plain. It is the close of my campaign for National prohibition the arrival of a former first Minister of state of the United States to speak in the largest open-air space available on the question of Europe. It is no secret that the American statesman is working in co-operation with the interests of America of one of the European powers, to put it mildly, are somewhat strained.

"I desire to call your attention to the enclosed advertisement published at great expense in the Boston newspapers, in which the recantation by the statesman of his former declaration in favor of prohibition is noted. The language is as follows:

"I hope that National prohibition will not be an issue in the campaign of 1916. I prefer to see the campaign fought out upon the economic issues which divide the leading parties."

"This is announced on the eve of the arrival of this distinguished citizen and upon the eve of a primary election in this commonwealth upon the question of National prohibition."

BRIDE WON HIGH IN AIR

AVIATOR'S SUIT FOR HAND OF FAIR PASSENGER SUCCEEDS.

Aquiline Debut in Breezy Manner Leads to Pretty Wedding After Thrilling Auto Ride.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Following an acquaintance begun in a breezy manner, a proposal made and accepted in an aeroplane 5000 feet above the earth and a courtship of 10 days, Miss Leila Hopkins, said to be beautiful and of a wealthy Baltimore family, and Frederick A. Thompson, of Manhattan avenue, visited a member of the Aero Club, were married in Yonkers.

According to the version which his friends say Mr. Thompson confided to the courtship of 10 days, Miss Leila Hopkins, said to be beautiful and of a wealthy Baltimore family, and Frederick A. Thompson, of Manhattan avenue, visited a member of the Aero Club, were married in Yonkers.

Until he reached the spot of the aviator's descent and found he needed a hand, Mr. Thompson scarcely noticed he had a companion on his ride. Then he saw that in the car he had appropriated was a beautiful young woman. Miss Hopkins, he said, was a member of the Aero Club, and she had a car which she could drive better than he.

Two days later Mr. Thompson took Miss Hopkins for her first aeroplane flight. As they soared a mile above Hempstead Plains he said he fidgeted about for a few minutes, and then proposed. The smile which wreathed his fair passenger's lips told him their affair was a success. The descent he thereupon made went down as his swiftest of record.

The marriage of Miss Hopkins and Mr. Thompson took place, as their acquaintance had begun, after a day's automobile. A high-powered racing automobile followed by a touring car stopped at the Hotel Hampshire.

From the first automobile stopped Mr. Thompson and Miss Hopkins and from the second a man who said he was Robert Groves.

The trio hurried into the office of the marriage license bureau. Mr. Thompson told John Geary, clerk, he and Miss Hopkins were married in the car.

"High noon," and while he was filling in the license they would be grateful if he would have some one on the way to perform the ceremony.

Mr. Geary telephoned to D. Ralph Dedrick, Alderman, and then began the series of questions which the law requires. Answer followed question with mechanical smoothness until the clerk asked Miss Hopkins where she lived. After a moment's decision she said, "Oh, my dear Geary."

Mr. Geary was about to ask her to be more explicit, but as he explained afterward, when he saw her blushing from her long eyelashes, he quailed and dropped the subject.

She said she was born at Bridgeton, N. J., and was the daughter of John C. and Margaret Jordan Hopkins.

Miss Hopkins gave her age as 26 and Mr. Thompson said he was 33. Mr. Dedrick arrived at the office at 11 o'clock and five minutes later the nuptial party emerged and started in the direction of this city. Mr. Groves was one witness.

Mr. Thompson since has been missing from his haunts. At his home his mother said he had not been there in several days. She has been hearing of his marriage and never had heard of Miss Hopkins.

His sister said the marriage was news to her.
