

CLIPPING NEWS

BY GERTRUDE P. CORBETT

A CONTINUOUS stream of men and women called at the Frank Wilder residence last night to bid them adieu, as they plan to leave October 5 for the south, en route to England.

While in San Francisco they will attend the fair and other points of interest surrounding the city, and then go to New Orleans for a brief visit with the Thomas Erskines. Mr. Erskine recently being transferred from the British consulate here to that post.

A card social will be held Thursday, October 7, by the members of St. Clare's parish and their friends, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. All are invited. The social will be conducted in the spacious hall of St. Clare's.

Miss Nell Bayly, whose wedding to Dr. Harlow Lee Gibbon will take place October 28, has been delightfully feted during the past few weeks. Recent affairs in her honor were the linen shower at which Mrs. William L. Powell, recent bride, also shared the honors, given by Miss Mildred Camp on Tuesday.

Miss Marjorie Cameron will entertain tomorrow with a tea for Mrs. Bayly, and next week there will be a number of affairs in her honor, among them the card parties for which Mrs. J. H. Cullip will be hostess on Wednesday, and the one planned by Mrs. William L. Powell for Friday.

Mrs. H. O. Hickox and small son will leave this morning for a visit with relatives in California. They probably will return about the middle of November.

Mrs. Floyd L. Brower left yesterday for California, where she will be the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harris, of Oakland. Later she will meet Mr. Brower in New York, where they will visit before returning to Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Berger, Jr. (Grace von Groenewald) are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a son who made his advent on Friday. He is named Henry Daird.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hall, of Tillamook, Or., are being felicitated upon the arrival of a son born September 22. They lived in Portland until last spring.

Mrs. Charles Read and daughter Miss Marjorie have just returned from a delightful visit at the fair in San Francisco.

Sentiment and romance played an important part in the courtship of four young Irvington people, Miss Isabelle Beckwith and Harry Foster Chapin, Miss Martha Chapin and John A. Beckwith, the engagements being announced on the same day, and now the double wedding is to follow. It will be a home affair on the evening of Tuesday, October 12, at the Beckwith residence in Irvington.

Only relatives and closest friends will attend the ceremony, and at the reception to follow additional friends will be asked.

The young people are being charmingly entertained with informal affairs, and they will be showered with social attentions before the wedding.

Miss Chapin has just returned from a week's visit with her uncle and aunt, Senator and Mrs. Addison G. Foster in Tacoma. She attended Annie Wright Seminary in Tacoma, and has a wide acquaintance among the younger set, who entertained with the numerous affairs in her honor during the week.

Mrs. Bruce Clendenning returned yesterday from Tillamook, and will pass a few days in town. On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Clendenning and children will leave for Spokane to pass the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Stahlstrom will entertain informally Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Laidlaw, of San Diego.

The Caledonia Club and Women's Auxiliary met last week to arrange their winter programme. The opening dance will take place on October 2 in Forester's Hall.

At the meeting songs and music, with Scottish airs on the bagpipes, and speeches, made the affair delightful.

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live."

Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefited by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVEY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham, a Bostonian, (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE SANDMAN STORY

By MRS. F. A. WALKER

Blackie and Gyp. Blackie was a black kitten, and Gyp a puppy. They lived in the same house and played together a great deal, but Blackie had sharp claws, and when Gyp did not do things to please her Blackie sometimes let him feel them.

One day Blackie found the door to the pantry open and a big dish of cream on the shelf. She looked at it with longing eyes, and even lapped a little of it.

"If I drink all of it," she thought, "the cook will look for me. I am sure, for this is for breakfast. She must have forgotten to put it away."

Blackie took another taste and then she thought of something. "I'll get Gyp in here and make him drink what I leave. Then the cook will think he drank the whole of it."

So she ran to find Gyp, but he was dozing in the sun, and besides that he did not like cream, so he did not jump up as Blackie thought he should, and she gave him a box in the ears with her paw, at the same time thrusting out her sharp claws until poor Gyp cried out against it. When he jumped up and ran for the house, Blackie following and humping her back.

Under the stove in the kitchen, and Blackie tried to drive him out. "Will you help me get the cream?" she asked, looking very fierce. "You will get half and it is very sweet and smooth."

Gyp did not like cream," said Gyp, backing away from Blackie. "Well, come in the pantry and watch me eat, then," said Blackie, giving very pleasant all of a sudden.

Gyp was completely fooled by her smooth tongue, and he followed her into the pantry. "Sit down there and watch me," commanded Blackie, jumping to the shelf where the dish of cream stood. When she saw Gyp standing on the floor and watching her, and Blackie was so absorbed in the cream that she forgot about Gyp.

He thought, "I will go out by the stove where it is warm." He stretched himself out by the stove with his nose toward the pantry, when suddenly something moved on the pantry floor, then it seemed to creep and crawl around the boxes, and Gyp was interested.

He stood up and watched; there it was again, and the cook opened the door, and in the same time Gyp saw it was a mouse running around the pantry floor. He sprang for it, and caught it just as the cook Blackie washing her face and paws beside the empty cream dish.

Blackie saw that she was caught as fast as the mouse in Gyp's mouth, and what was worse, she knew it was her work to have caught the mouse. Blackie jumped, but the cook was too quick for her that time; she took the broom, and poor Blackie was beaten and driven out to the kitchen later she saw Gyp eating chicken and bread and gravy, and heard the cook say, "Good Gyp, he is a nice puppy to catch the mouse; that Blackie is a lazy thief, and I mean to drive her out every time she comes in here."

When she said into the kitchen later she saw Gyp eating chicken and bread and gravy, and heard the cook say, "Good Gyp, he is a nice puppy to catch the mouse; that Blackie is a lazy thief, and I mean to drive her out every time she comes in here."

The next day out in the yard Blackie tried to make up with Gyp, but he had found her out.

"You wanted me to eat some of the cream, didn't you, so I gave you some when the cook found the empty dish," he said.

"If you had been paying attention to your work you would have caught the mouse and had a nice warm place to sleep this winter. Now you will have to sleep in the barn."

Blackie showed her claws and ran toward him, but Gyp's mad was up and he stood still and growled and showed his teeth.

"Old Apple Mary."

An eminent critic has come out with the statement that a taste for poetry is reviving in America, that not only are Americans reading more poetry, but that they are writing more poetry.

Those who consider poetry of little value may pay scant attention to this statement. In fact, they may regard it as evidence of deterioration on the part of those Americans who are manifesting an appetite for poetry.

Those who get inspiring draughts for the spirit from poetry need no one to come to its defense. They rejoice that it is growing to its stature of manhood in America. But are not those who do not so regard it, who are manifesting an appetite for poetry, losing something whose value and pleasure they have never yet seen, or they will have none of them.

Well, then, let's try to reckon poetry in the every-day book of commercial value. Mr. Business Man walks down the street in the morning thinking of the deals that are on for the day and planning to come out on top. He sees the familiar fruit stand in the little hole in the wall, presided over by a fat, commonplace looking woman; and if he thinks of it at all, he probably reasons idly that if you bought apples there you had better watch out or she'd stick you with some of those speckled ones, he sees out of the tail of his eye. And then he goes on down the street, still pondering how to get the best end of the day's business.

But suppose the evening before he had read Bliss Carman's poem, "Masks of Delity," and before he fell asleep, or while he was eating his breakfast, or as he went down the street, his mind was at one with the beauty of that poem and he was thinking with its writer:

"Where are my dreams of beauty gone? This air, this wood, this very stone— The same, yet not the same! I see Them now, as masks of delity."

There is a friendliness of light About them, new and infinite; And they will never more appear The alien common things they were.

In every face I shall deary Some glimpse of divinity;

Old Apple Mary at her stall Is not her dingy self at all."

He would not see the fat, commonplace vender of fruit, ready to take advantage of him, his eyes would be looked upon were they not filled with the poet's vision. He would have seen another expression of the same power of creation that was being manifested in himself. He would have regarded her with friendliness instead of suspicion. His heart would have warmed to her. It would have warmed to all his fellowman. He would have had
