Philadelphia has had more than its share of world's series excitement in the past decade, but the coming ing strongle between the Phillies and the Boston Americans will be the first in history that the National League has relied upon a Philadelphia representative to uphold its dignity and honor.

For 40 years the National League has been plugging along and 34 of those years found the Phillies hard at it trying to annex a bunting. Yet it remained for Pat Moran in the year 1915 to lead the Phillie fans out of the "slough of despond."
