SOCIOLOGICAL DRAMA, AT THE

NATIONAL THEATER.

More than 300 leading Portland physicians, club women and social workers have sent to the National Theater the strongest kinds of commendation on "Damaged Goods," the picturization of Eugene Brieux' drama now running.

But one unfavorable comment has been received. Especially strong in urging that all in Portland should see it are many of the leading ministers.

The leading role, that of George Dupont, whose life "Damaged Goods" pictures, is played by Richard Bennett, who was responsible for the stage presentation in the first instance. In this one picture, in seven reels, Mr. Bennett has leaped to the position of a motion-picture actor of the front rank.
