

THE FRONT BEND TO LAKEVIEW POSSIBLE

Recent Developments Indicate Interest by Union Pacific Company.

STRAHORN MAKES SURVEY

No Explanation Offered Regarding Associates in Going Over Ground, ex-Official of Railway Saying Work Not Significant.

Is the Union Pacific system preparing to extend its lines to Lakeview? Recent developments in interior Oregon would justify an affirmative conclusion.

Yet the powers and possibilities of railroad in these uncertain times are subject to severe limitations and the results of the investigations now in progress in Central Oregon have by no means been determined.

But the connection of Robert E. Strahorn with the present developments lends strength to the water cascade position. Mr. Strahorn successfully negotiated the North Coast project for the Union Pacific interests a few years ago and subsequently outlined the Southern Pacific's electrification of its lines radiating out of Portland. At the time this latter development was started the Southern Pacific still was controlled by the Union Pacific system.

Strahorn Directs Survey. A few months ago Mr. Strahorn retired as president of the Portland, Eugene & Eastern, which name the Southern Pacific's electric lines were designated before they became incorporated with the Union Pacific system.

More recently, however, he has been directing a crew of men who are conducting a survey of lines between Bend and Lakeview. Bend is the present terminus of the O.-W. R. & N. Company's line into Central Oregon. The O.-W. R. & N. Company is the western end of the Union Pacific system.

Apparently Mr. Strahorn's recent activities in this connection were inspired by the people of Bend and other places in interior Oregon who recently petitioned him to investigate the possibilities of railroad construction east, south and west from Bend.

Mr. Strahorn's engineers, it is understood, have confined their efforts largely to the line between Bend and Lakeview. They virtually have completed their work and are expected to have reports ready in a few days. These reports will show what the physical nature of such a railroad would be and what, approximately, it would cost.

Prematurely it is reported that so far as the physical conditions are concerned the proposed line is entirely feasible. It is estimated that the cost would not exceed 10 per cent, it is said. For distances of many miles, it is explained, the road could be built on a tangent without any perceptible grade whatever.

Economic Conditions to Rule. Economic conditions, however, will be the governing factors in determining whether the road is to be built or not. At present the line to Bend is not earning operating expenses. The Central Oregon country has a wide reach of country following completion of the railroad, to meet the previous expectations of the railroad builders; nor of the people of Central Oregon.

Lakeview is a prosperous city in itself and the country around there is productive and thriving. Between Bend and Lakeview is a wide reach of country now only partially developed and lacking of further development largely on account of insufficient transportation facilities.

With these conditions in mind it is believed possible that the Union Pacific may seek to protect its present investments in the interior of the state by reaching out for certain business that lies just beyond its present terminus. Mr. Strahorn's interest in the project is a wide reach of country following completion of the railroad, to meet the previous expectations of the railroad builders; nor of the people of Central Oregon.

Our work in Central Oregon," he said on his return from Bend the other day, "does not necessarily mean anything. We merely are running out lines to see what railroads can be built and what such roads would cost. Our investigations may prove that it is physically or economically impossible to build any roads."

New Line Being Pushed. Meanwhile the Union Pacific—through the O.-W. R. & N. Company—is pushing its line across the state from Riverside toward Malheur Lake. This line originally was intended to connect with the Southern Pacific's new Naticum-Klamath cutoff.

In the event of the Bend-Lakeview construction, it is probable that the Riverside extension will be built westward to connect with the other road somewhere south of Bend.

486 FIRES IN SEPTEMBER

Forestry Service Reports Blazes Numerous This Year.

Despite the fact that the cost of fighting forest fires in this district was much lower this season than last, more than four thousand fires were reported in September, 1915, than during the same month of the 1914 season.

In fact, according to the figures recently compiled by the officials of the forest service, during September of this year there were more fires than for the same month during the preceding four years.

Beginning with the year 1908 the number of fires reported during September are as follows: 1908, 45; 1909, 75; 1910, 35; 1911, 31; 1912, 31; 1913, 114; 1914, 117; 1915, 486.

parlors to their own state, are expected to furnish the produce free.

"If people of Oregon only realized what a benefit our display is to the state," he said, "they would be only too glad to give."

"Oregon's record already has been of immense value in advertising the state. We have taken all the big prizes for dairy products and for many varieties of fruit. These awards already have brought us thousands of inquiries from prospective settlers regarding farming conditions here."

Mr. Freytag explains that Oregon failed to make a better showing in the cereal division because the exhibits from this state were sent in small lots, while those from Montana, which won the first prize, were exhibited in lots of five bushels each. Oregon sent down meager quarts and pecks of its best wheat.

The Chamber of Commerce has promised to co-operate with Mr. Freytag and the Oregon Commission in securing a large display of late fruits and vegetables, and is urging every community in the state to respond to the appeal.

OHIO PASTOR IS CALLED

ST. DAVID'S CHURCH CHOOSES SUCCESSOR TO REV. MR. TALBOT.

Career of Rev. Thomas Jenkins in Religious Work Notable—Many High Posts Held.

After careful deliberation on the part of the vestry of St. David's Episcopal Church, a successor to the Rev. Henry Russell Talbot has been found. The new pastor, Rev. Thomas Jenkins, now of St. Paul's of Fremont, O., is said to be one of the eloquent and able men of the church.

He was educated at Kenyon College and Divinity School; ordained a deacon in 1900 by Bishop Vincent, Southern Ohio; ordained a priest in 1901 by Bishop Vincent; was a member of the Cincinnati Association Mission, 1900-01; built St. Peter's Church, Carthage, O., 1901; joined the Alaska staff, under Bishop Rowe, 1902 to 1910; Mission priest, Ketchikan, Alaska, 1902 to 1908; built St. John's Church, rector, Indian Day School and Hospital in Ketchikan; was delegate to the general convention in 1908 and to the Pan-Anglican Congress, 1908; edited and published Alaska Cross-Bearer two years; member of Council of Advice, 1904-1910; examining chaplain, 1904-1910; archdeacon of Southeastern Alaska, 1908-1910; rector of St. Paul's, Fremont, O., 1910-1915; member of Diocesan Board Missions, 1910-1915; organizing secretary, Cambler Summer School, 1914-1915; elected delegate to Provincial Synod, 1912-1915, and is chairman diocesan commission to arrange the reunion of the Episcopal mission in Ohio dioceses, and a member of general committee commission

Both are widowers, but each has a big generation of children and grandchildren. Myron L. Taft has resided in New York State practically all his life. His elder brother, more adventurous, left home when a lad of 20, going first to Missouri and later coming to the Pacific Coast. In 1859 he walked all the way from Booneville, Mo., to Red Bluff, Cal., just before the Oregon line, driving a herd of sheep the entire distance.

"Our train was attacked many times by Indians while we were on the way," said Mr. Taft, "and we had some exciting adventures, but we came through all right. Since that time I have lived on the Pacific Coast, for many years in Portland."

Mr. Taft resides at the Columbia Hotel, at First and Columbia streets, and has children living in Seattle. It is with the latter that his brother is staying. The two got together every morning and take in the sights of the town. Yesterday morning they visited the Courthouse, and later went up to Council Crest, so that the New York brother might catch a glimpse of the mountains and landscapes visible from that elevation.

Brothers Have Much to Tell. "We have so much to tell each other that it seems we will never get through," remarked one of the brothers. "You can just bet we are having a splendid time together. Each of us is getting details of family history dating back half a century of which he had not heard previously."

The brothers are especially proud of their relationship to ex-President Taft. Each spoke of having personally met their distinguished relative. M. L. Taft has a cherished possession. It is a pressed flower, which, as a flower in bloom, was given to the former President while the latter was touring New York State. P. P. Taft is especially proud of the fact that during the recent visit to the Taft family recently in Massachusetts his name was read from the roster as that of a member of the family resident in Oregon.

Fruits and Vegetables Are Sought and Freight Will Be Paid on All Donations Sent.

"We need more fruit and vegetables for the competitive exhibits and for our own building," said O. E. Freytag, chief of agriculture for the Oregon Commission at the San Francisco fair, who was in Portland on business yesterday.

Mr. Freytag came up for the State Fair at Salem last week and secured some of the prize-winning displays there for exhibition at San Francisco. The State Fair Board gave him 25 boxes of the best apples and some other fruit. Individual exhibitors also gave him some of their best products.

While in Portland yesterday Mr. Freytag secured other good fruit specimens from G. L. Davenport and from Mark Levy.

The Commission also needs potatoes, onions, turnips and other garden produce. This class of vegetable should be sent in quantities of two sacks for each variety. The Commission will pay the freight on all such shipments. The growers, if they are loyal and

SUNDAY REST LAW AIM

INITIATION AT NEXT GENERAL ELECTION NOW IS PROPOSED. Measure Would Close Theaters and Other Places of Amusement and Even Drug Stores.

Plans are under consideration for initiating a Sunday closing law at the next general election that would require all employers to give their employees Sunday off as a day of rest, no matter what their business, and would close drug stores and theaters and other places of amusement, and make it impossible to obtain even a newspaper on Sunday.

The moving spirit behind the proposed law is Dr. G. L. Tuttle, field secretary of the One-Day-of-Rest-in-Seven League. He discussed the Sunday's rest week feature before the Ministerial Union of Portland at its meeting Monday. The proposed law was endorsed, and the Ministerial Union also adopted resolutions relative to the present Sunday law.
