NEW PIPELINE IS OPENED Oregon City Gets South Fork Water

OREGON CITY, Or., Oct. 10.—(Specia.)—"Oregon City will be using water from the South Fork of the Clarkamas, carried through the $375,000 pipeline recently completed, either Monday or Tuesday," said William Andresen, Tuesday," said William Andresen, chairman of the South Fork Water Commission, last night.

II. A. Rands, engineer in charge, spent Saturday along the upper part of the line. The valves at the intake are being opened slowly, so that the pressure is steadily increased until the full 3,000,000 gailons of water is flowing daily to Oregon City. In case the slightest defect is discovered under the full pressure, it will be remedied at once. The water is now flowing into the reservoir, but the town is supplied direct from the pumps at the filtering station. Practically all taste has been washed from the pipe.
