BASE LINE MAY BE STRAIGHTENED Surveys have been made on the proosed extension of the Base Line road from the foot of Baker's hill, where the Troutdale road crosses it, to the Automobile Club grounds, with the view of changing the Base Line road to that route. The petition asking for this extension filed some time ago contained nearly 1000 names, but the county commissioners did not favor the extension. This extension would shorten the Base his extension would shorten the Base missioners did not favor the extension. This extension would shorten the Base Lipe road materially, it is said, to Sandy River, and do away with several steep hills on the west of the Sandy approaching the bridge across the Sandy River. This extension would converge into the other roads at the road makes several turns toward the south before reaching the Sandy River.

POWELL-STREET WIDENING IS SLOW.—Proceedings for the widening of Powell street from Milwaukie to East Nineteenth are being carried out somewhat slowly. Most of the houses have been moved back the required five feet on each side, on the new street lines. Some of the dilapidated sidewalks have been replaced, but the street generally is in a very bad condition. Most of the siewalks are broken up and dangerous. Between East Sixteenth and East Nineteenth the walks are nearly all gone. It is planned to improve Woodward avenue, a street connecting with Powell, thus giving Powell street an outlet to Grand avenue.

COMMISSION STUDYING COMPENSA-

Portland Interviews Declared to Have Been Fruitful of Information From Both Views, Oregon law.

The members of the commision are:
A. V. Pineo. chairman of the commission, departmental solicitor of the Canadian government; J. H. McVety, representing the labor interests of the Canadian government: David Robert son, a large manufacturer, who represents the employer, and F. Allbutt a court stenographer of Victoria, who is acting as the secretary of the com mission.

The conference with Mr. Kerr yes terday was an explanation of the legal aspects and the constitutionality of the Oregon law. Conferences with other Portland men allowed the Canadians to gain arguments pro and con as to what course to follow in determining the sense of the clauses in the proposed law relating to first-aid and the waiting period.

Members of the Canadian commission are anxious to study the Toronto law, as they consider it to be the one that will be most applicable to their interests.

Plot Hinges on Strong.

Grace Connors, persecuted by Strong, is saved by the ministrations of an old doctor, an agnostic, if we are to believe his profanity and delightfully honest philosophy. He and the church directors have a lot of cheery clashes in that play, and the old doctor never gets worsted. Hand in hand with a nice little nurse, the old doctor never gets worsted. Hand in hand with a nice little nurse, the old doctor never gets worsted. Hand in hand with a nice little nurse, the old doctor helps the old and sick and poor in the village, and when the church steps in, they two step out.

It is so in the case of Grace Connors, and at her bedside the nurse tells Dan what she thinks of his calling. Pomp and ceremony and station and the fuss and feathers of his calling please her not at all. She wants him to give it all up—and on condition that if he does she will marry him.

He is saved the trouble of deciding, however, for old Strong and the board ask him to resign because of the help he has given to Grace Connors. He and the nurse bave become the target for gossip, and the church cannot toler-for gossip, and the church cannot tolersparkle. Carl Winterhoff is a diguified Dan Matthews, with an excellent carrying voice. Charles Ropp is delightful as the Irish lad Denny, and Otto Hammer—what a pun-compelling name for an actor—is genuinely a comedian and affords great hilarity in his character study of an old pillar of the church. Jack Sherman is the bluff, goodnatured doctor, and Bess Dunlop gives a sweet natural portrayal of the purce. a sweet, natural portrayal of the nurse, with Beth Merrill, a very pretty girl, playing the wretched Grace.

dren who had completed the required course of study.

Graduating from the beginners' department into the primary were: Mary Louise Ripley, Ruth Van Schoonhoven, Ruth Walters, Vadore Millard, Arthur Kornahrens, Norman Donaldson, Wendell Monros and Elizabeth Allyn Military training in the public schools Military training in the public schools of the country is a good thing, physically and for discipline and will not encourage the war spirit, declared a strong resolution adopted by the Gresham Grange Saturday, after the question was discussed by Elmer F. Goodwin, principal of the Gresham Union High School, and George W. Stapleton. Graduating from the primary depart-ment into the junior department were: Virginia Fenton, Gracana Johnson, Ellen Lauder, Helene Oates, Catherine Ross, Gladys Stansbery, Meryie Smith, Jene Toneyhill, Ethel Tietjen, Carlton Condit and Harold Rice.

Union High School, and George W. Stapleton.

Principal Goodwin delivered the main address on military training, and explained that, in his judgmennt, such training is excellent for physical development and for discipline. Mr. Goodwin did not think such training would have the effect of promoting militarism. He emphasized the point that such training is necessary for the physical well-being of the boys, and makes them better citizens.

Mr. Stapleton spoke for preparedness, declaring the country should be ready to meet any emergency, and pointed out that America would be helpless if attacked now. He believed there should be military training in the schools and that a strong reserve of well-trained men should be developed.

Mr. Goodwin was the former principal of the Brownsville High School, where students had a system of self-government. H. L. St. Clair introduced the resolution favoring military training in the public schools. Gresham is the first Grange in the state to take this action. There was a large attendance.
