BRITAIN ACTS AS BANKER

Where and to What Extent Money Shall Be Spent Is Determined by Dominating British Influence on Board.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Of the millions of dollars spent daily in this country by the allies for war supplies, not a dollar, it was learned authoritatively, can be spent without the sanction of the British government, obtained from a committee sitting in London.

The personnel of this committee has never been published and probably

The personnel of this committee has never been published, and probably never been published, and probably hangs a tale—the old, old tale of the presentatives of each of the allied nations from Great Britain to Montenegro, controls absolutely the purchase of all war supplies in any foreign country, acts as a financial check and country, acts as a financial check and green to red, the most gorgeous red supervisor over all the war chests of all the allies, and seeks to eliminate competitive bidding.

system of placing one big order at a time in this country. When the contract for this order is signed the next mation's needs are taken up and another contract is placed. This is maintained until all are cared for.

Britain Acts as Banker.

Britain Acts as Banker.

Great Britain, as banker for the allies, dominates the committee. One of the chief functions of the British members is to act as a mouthplece of the British treasury, allotting to other allied nations the amounts advanced by Great Britain to them for the purchases of war supplies in this country. Each country is financed to a certain extent—in the case of Russia, almost wholly—by Great Britain. The British members advise the representatives of other nations where and just tives of other nations where and just how much Great Britain will permit them to spend at stated intervals, how much they will be permitted to con-tract for in the United States with the tract for in the United States with the British guarantee of payment and how the money shall be spent.

The only fime the committee's plan falled of operation was about six months ago and the effects of the failure have not yet been eradicated. This was in connection with purchases by Russia in the United States. Russia has been notified by the British members that she might spend a certain sum of money for war supplies in this country. The sum is believed to have been between $290,900,000 and $300,000,000.

Huge Commitments Make Trouble. Whether the allotment was fully understood by the Russian government is not known, but what Russia did was to spend the sum allotted and in addition make huge commitments in this country for further supplies. These commitments, covering many months, were said to run into the hundreds of millions of dollars—a sum in excess of the amount allotted her by the British

In making these contracts, Russia apparently failed to consult the committee. When the contracts became due in part, Russia had insufficient funds to meet them and the commitfunds to meet them and the committee, not having authorized the making of the contracts, had to devise quickly some method of paying the bills. This was extremely difficult and the demoralization of the foreign exchange markets in this country was attributed in no small measure to this cause.
Since that time Russla has adhered strictly to the wishes of the committee.

Bills Paid by British.

In return, Great Britain is paying her bills here. Not only these bills, but those of Italy, and more recently France, are being paid today by Great Britain.

A single financial house—J. P. Morgan & Co.—acts as the disbursing agency of the British government in this country. Its disbursements are understood to cover payments of all goods purchased for the allies here.

Great Britain keeps a record of the amounts which her allies draw against her and separate transactions between the British government and those of the other allies provide for a settling of the score among the allies.

The $500,000,000 Anglo-French credit loan just negotiated, it is said, will provide payment for a large quantity of vide payment for a large quantity of goods purchased here for Russia.

Over purchases made in home markets by varjous nations, the committee holds no supervision. Its sphere is limited strictly to purchases outside the boundary lines of the nations at war and their colonies.

The committee is designated by a French title, the English translation of which is "the international war supplies committee."

Under the guidance of the committee the allies can refrain from a competition which if permitted would send prices to prohibitive leveis and consequently swell the cost of conducting the war. Instead of coming into the American market when supplies are needed and waging a financial contest for them, the allies have adopted a system of placing one big order at a many cases, that such an irritating thing exists.

Time and again visiting tourists have come into the hotels laden with the graceful vines and brilliant leaves of polson oak, to learn all too late the manner of herb they had plucked.

All of which is fine for the druggists who have polson oak remedies to sell, but, as the Civic Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce would suy, "a darned poor attraction to put up for visiting tourists from the East."

There seems to be no way to combat the danger, except for the Chamber or other organization to take steps to warn the tourists, through the hotel clerks, that, when they are out in the Oregon woods, if they see a graceful vine, or a slender shrub (it grows in both forms), which has brilliant red leaves shaped in the general contour of a small oak leaf without the deep flanges in the edge—that is a shrub to look at and not to pick, if they want to carry away a pleasant memory of to carry away a pleasant memory of their visit to Portland.
