John R. Sumner, as Daniel Taylor, the overbearing customs officer, through three acts is the irritating Nemesis on the trail of Denby and the bully who forces the heroine into the ungracious role of betraying Denby, furnishes a good piece of characteri-zation. The panics of Monty Vaughn, who is Walter Regan off stage, are the especial comedy feature of the Smuggling Roles Enacted.

Henry Hall and Elizabeth Ross, as the two Harringtons, are also a pleasant duo of characters to supply byplay and comedy to the plot.

As for the play, it develops on the efforts of Taylor to land Denby for smuggling. In the first act Miss Cartwright is obliged to promise to assist in the apprehension of the supposed criminal, under the threat that if she does not her sister will be sent to jall on a trifling charge which has been found against her.

SWIM OPEN TO COUPLES School Tanks Are Reserved or Wednesday Evenings.

A "social swim" will be an innovation at the Couch and Shattuck schools swimming tanks next Wednesday even-ing. In response to many requests to arrange a time when women can use the tanks with their escorts, so that they could have more help in learning to swim, Robert Krohn, supervisor of physical training in the Portland schools, has arranged for one evening a week as a "social swim."

Not more than 25 couples may enter the tank at one time. An hour will be allowed for each group of 25 couples. There will be three periods, from 7 to 8, 8 to 8, and 9 to 10. A woman instructor will be in charge of each tank.

Interest in swimming continues un-sbated. The attendance both among shildren and grownups has increased each week since the tanks were opened. the daily average at each school for both children and adults during the last week, school days only, was 305. The average attendance for Saturdays luring the past month was 300 for such tank.

The Shattuck tank, with a man in-structor, is reserved for boys Mondays and Tuesdays and Wednesday morn-ings, and Monday and Tuesday evenwrinkling his own immaculate shirt front or jarring the lightest ash from the tip of his cigarette.

Members of the Baker Theater family, who have been first-nighting there for seasons past, have seen him in both roles and have idolized him equally in either. Yesterday they had the privilege of seeing him in a play in which they couldn't tell up to the last moment which of the two he might be—but, just the same, they were "with him."

Plot Has Good Punch.

"Under Cover" doesn't present, in the body of the play, any startlingly new character studies, but there is no disputing the punch to the plot. It is one of those "wheels within wheels" plots, in which the audience just succeeds in getting the plan "all doped switch in the current of events that throws their dope sheet all off.

BOY BATTLES FOR EYE

Lad Wounded by Former Inmate of State Hospital May Lose Sight.

It will not be known for a few days whether or not Clayton Davolt, aged 16, of Freeport, who was shot by Eugene Rhodes, former inmate of the Oregon State Hospital for the Insane, when on his way home from a masquerade at Kelso, Wash., Friday night, will have the sight of his left eye.

He is at St. Vincent's Hospital with 24 bullet wounds made by the shotgun charge. Two shot entered his left eye, and attending physicians fear he will lose its sight. His condition otherwise is not serious, should no poisoning set in.

VIRGINIA STORY IS TOLD

Clever Skits Keep Audiences in High Spirits and Dog Act Is Especially Interesting-Old Favorites on Programme.

A strong, well-balanced and highclass bill is offered for the pleasure of Orpheum patrons this week. There is variety, spice and life a-plenty.

The headline attraction is "A Breath of Old Virginia," which may truthfully be termed a classic. Genevieve Cliff, the heroine in the playlet, is a clever actress and she is ably supported by George Hart, Charles Knowlton, Charles Bartling and A. E. Weed. The staging is perfect in detail and the plot brims with human interest and appeal. This is the first sketch in vaudeville in which the story introduced is visualized.
