STORM IN WOMAN'S CLUBRANKS BREAKS

Political Science Members in Wordy Battle Assail Mrs. M. L. Stevens, President.

DISHONESTY IS CHARGED

Exclusion of Outsiders at Library Meeting Is Not Allowed and Turmoil Ends Only When A Ijournment Is Effected.

Charges of dishonesty, unfairness and Charges of dishonesty, unfairness and disgraceful actions were brought by Mrs. M. L. T. Hidden Tuesday against Mrs. Mary L. Stevens, president of the Woman's Political Science Club. at the meeting of the organization held in 100m A. Library.

The trouble started over the legality of the granting or withholding of credentials to Mrs. Hidden as an alternate to the state convention of the Oregon Prederation of Women's Clubs last week in Salem.

Salem. Within two minutes after the subject within two minutes after the subject was presented, the club was in a turmoil. Repeated calls for "question," "order" and an appeal from the decision of the chair characterized the session.

After a long and stormy meeting, little after a long and stormy meeting, it. the was accomplished except that a score of women had had their say and a committee had been named to take up the matter of Mrs. Hidden's much-talked-of credentials. Mrs. Stevens appointed Mrs. J. R. Oatman, Mrs. Miriam MacDonald and Mrs. Anna Fulton.

Exclusion Is Not Permitted. Exclusion is Not Permitted.

The business session was called to order after the programme, which consisted of addresses by Dr. Mary Mac-Lachtan, Miss Lyda O'Bryon and S. L. Riker. An attempt was made to exclude Mrs. Colista Dowling and representatives of the press, but on the ruling of the Librarian that the building is public, the non-members were allowed to remain.

"The credentials committee said they never got those credentials until Thursday morning," declared Mrs. Hidden, and added further: "They said it would take a policeman to get them from you. Mrs. Robert Berger told me she did not get them on Wednesday as you assert."

Mrs. Stevens asked Mrs. Thomas Hawkes to take the said they must be present to vote. No proxies will be permitted.

Mrs. Hidden interposed: "Then the Lord only knows where those credentials were."

That she had asked the advice of the state federation president, Mrs. Sarah A. Evans, and had tried to be fair, was Mrs. Stevens' protest. "Oh, my Lord, of course you had the backing of the state president," said Mrs. Hidden, who then took the opportunity to speak of the state organization.

"The place to fight Mrs. Evans and the alleged machine is in the state convention," said Mrs. Uthoff.

Mrs. Hawkes rapped for order and begged the women to keep their heads and tell the truth if possible.

At the close of her defense Mrs. Stevens said that inasmuch as her veracity had been questioned by Mrs. Hidden and her honor and been impeached she asked that Mrs. Colista Dowling, ex-president of the Woman's State Press Club, be allowed to testify that she had told the truth about those credentials. Storms of objection met this suggestion, and Mrs. Dowling did not receive the courtesy of the floor.

"It is a disgrace for us to have a president who will do these dirty, discreptuable things. We should have one who is honest." This was another comment of Mrs. Hidden, who had demanded that the resolutions offered by Mrs. Clark be acted upon them and there. Mrs. Stevens ruled that they be turned over to the resolutions committee, Mrs. Hidden objected. No action was taken.

Aronson's Great Sale

T EIGHT O'CLOCK this morning Rueff, A the diamond man, opened the big vault in Aronson's Jewelry Store and took out the trays and boxes that hold the diamonds. He gets them ready for the window show every morning. Every stone is checked in the morning and checked back at night. Very soon along comes Aronson himself.

"We want to sell more diamonds," said he. "I'm going to mark some out myself this morning."

This is what he did:

MARKED a whole trayful of Diamond Rings, worth $12.50 to $15.00, for $7.65. Another tray was filled with stones marked one hundred dollars.

"We'll sell the whole lot for, say sixty-nine seventy-five!" said he.

night, on Monday, set a new record for attendance this year, but both yesterday afternoon and last night surpassed the records of any day previous. New attractions are being brought into the programmes each day, and the entertainment committee is using every effort to make every visitor to the show eager to come again and again to enjoy its attractions.

For two hours the work of making still further reductions went on. A thousand dollar 3-karat Blue Diamond Ring was set back to $796.00. A hundred dollar Sapphire Diamond Brooch was marked $68.50. A $90.00 Pendant of Pearls, surrounding a beautiful Cameo, is now $57.50. A magnificent Diamond Sunburst now $57.50. A magnificent Diamond Sunburst is $298.00; it was $450.00. A Diamond and Onyx Bracelet that was $175.00 is cut to $129.50. A Platinum and Diamond La Valliere, which was $300.00, is now $215.00. A single Stone, absolutely flawless (so the Diamond Man tells me), now $875.00; it was $11.00. A very big Dinner Ring that was $325.00 is reduced to $239.00. A crown-shaped Pin of Diamonds and Platinum that has always been $1000 is cut to $685.00. A Scarf Pin of Diamonds that was $100.00 is now $67.50. Another fine Scarf Pin (Amethyst and Diamonds), worth $75.00, is now offered at

And so on throughout the whole stock.

T NOON I called to see an old friend at A Eilers Music House. She said: "You make me sick! You've put a Sapphire Ring in the window that I've been looking at for a month and promising I'd buy for Christmas - and now it is sixty-nine seventy-five; somebody's sure to get it be-

So I offered to go back to the store and take it out of the window. And the little lady wrote a check for it on the spot and we sent it over within twenty minutes.

Rueff, Aronson's Diamond Expert, said when the diamonds were all marked.

"Great Scott! If you ever see anybody selling clothing as cheap as these diamonds you just put me next.

"I need a new suit of clothes!"

But he didn't say it for publication. When he sees this in the paper he'll blush to the roots

La Vallieres, which are still wonderfully popular, are $11.65 for the $17.50 to $22.50 ones. Four seventy-five for the $7.50 one. And $1.75 for a group bought originally to sell for $5.00. All the foregoing are solid gold, of course, and the designs, while not heavy, are very dainty.

AM afraid I have already written more than enough for the space available today. It's such a wonderful sale-I could never tire of telling of it. And I've omitted ninety per cent of the items available. Here are Clocks at a third off. Cut Glass at half. Umbrellas at half. Gorham Sterling Silver at one-fourth less. All the fine "Hurd" Stationery at half. All the Watches at a third and a fourth less—Hampden, Hamilton, Rockford, Howard, Elgin and Waltham-every one reduced-even the newest bracelet styles. DLEASE shop in the mornings if you can; it is better for everybody. Of course, you may make reservations for Christmas. Already the Balcony is filled with purchases for later delivery.

And as one woman said: "The sale has come at the right time for me, at any rate!" You can depend on the store and the advertising, for above all else the store's fair name will be upheld. And we shall not knowingly say or write a single thing that we would wish to recall in the years to come.
