

DEFEAT IS EXPECTED

Coach Glaze Predicts Oregon Will Win Tomorrow.

WEIGHT HANDICAP TOO BIG

University of Southern California Deplores Loss of Kelley, Great Hurdler; Mentor Says Without Him There's No Chance.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4.—(Special).—So that the good people of Los Angeles would not be disappointed, Ralph Glaze, football coach of the University of Southern California, today declared that the Los Angeles school will be defeated by Oregon University here Saturday.

"We are not going into the battle with any expectation of victory," said Glaze today. "It is not within the people of this city to get the impression that we are, for I realize, and so does everybody else, that the Oregon team is a much better match than mine."

"It is not to be expected that a little team like that of the University of Southern California, weighing about 150 pounds on the average, can make much of an impression against a giant team like Oregon's, weighing more than 150 pounds on the average."

"Now that Kelly is out of the lineup I do not expect we will make so good a showing. With such a famous runner on our team we would have worried Oregon to death."

IRRIGATION PLAN GAINS

Crook Court Sets December 3 for Hearing for Petition.

PRINEVILLE, Or., Nov. 4.—(Special).

The organization of the Ochoeez irrigation district is taking definite form. A petition signed by 53 landowners in the proposed district yesterday was filed with the County Clerk of Crook County, and the County Court entered an order setting December 3 as the time for presenting the petition to the County Court, at which time the final boundaries of the district will be determined and an election called upon the organization of the irrigation district.

Twenty thousand acres of land, all privately owned and the greater part now under cultivation, but without water, will become the heaviest producing section in Eastern Oregon. The land is noted for its fertility. The business men and stockgrowers of this section have begun a movement for the Central Oregon line from Burns instead of the route proposed across what is commonly called the High Desert.

The prosecution charged that Sparling appropriated for his own use the money obtained from Mrs. Manshard.

Representative to Visit Last County in District Next Week.

THE DALLES, Or., Nov. 4.—(Special).—Representative N. J. Sinnott returned to his home in the Dalles yesterday after a tour of 16 of the 17 counties of his Congressional district which he has visited since August 10 to get first-hand information of the conditions and needs of all classes of his constituents.

The railroads would not take him to the many remote parts of Eastern Oregon, so Mr. Sinnott bought an automobile. With the machine he was able to visit nearly every precinct of the 16 counties. The Representative will visit the last of the 17 counties, Hood River, the first of next week.

Kelso Ticket Is Nominated.

KELSO, Wash., Nov. 4.—(Special).—A most unique situation in Kelso politics resulted from the city primary Tuesday when every candidate upon the ticket was nominated. Only one man filed for each office, and so little interest was taken in the primary that only 57 votes out of approximately 1000 were cast in the three wards of the city. The candidates nominated were: Mayor, C. Q. Talvert; Clerk, M. J. Lord; Treasurer, C. C. Bashor; Councilman-at-Large, C. H. Sweeney; First Ward, W. A. Mitchell; Second Ward, Andrew Carlson; Third Ward, J. N. Moore; Attorney, J. J. King.

PEOPLES LIKES OPERA STARS

Geraldine Farrar Proves as Good in Filmed "Carmen" as on Stage.

Geraldine Farrar, the great prima donna who temporarily forsook the opera for the screen version of "Carmen," is proving popular at the Peoples Theater this week.

"Carmen," the stupendous Paramount production, is of faultless photography and splendid settings. The plot of the beautiful cigarette girl, who plays havoc with all who love her, is too well known for explanation. As Carmen, Miss Farrar is in her natural element, for she made the role famous in grand opera.

A number of exquisite mountain scenes and beautiful indoor sets are supplemented by plenty of thrills. The highlight is an unusual motion-picture accomplishment, for the horse is wounded, the fight is genuine and the bull is actually killed in battle with the bandolier.

The production is well classed as the greatest Paramount picture yet attempted. Large audiences have attended all performances of the play at the Peoples.

PATHOS RULES IN FILMS

"TRILBY," THRILLING TALE OF STAGE AND MAGIC, AT PICKFORD.

Theda Bara and Geraldine Farrar as "Carmen" at Majestic and Peoples Are Fascinating.

One of the most tragic of current photoplays is "Trilby," playing this week at the Pickford. Clara Kimball Young, as the beautiful young model, who, under the spell of hypnotism, becomes a great singer, is one of the most striking of the equitable film stars. Wilson Mackay plays a strong role in the part of an artist.

Most of the scenes are laid in the Latin quarter of Paris, where artists, painters, sculptors and musicians are at work. Through "Trilby," the pretty little model, Svengali, the Eastern magician, gives his musical talent to the girl in the form of a great contract voice.

Bills.—The English suitor of little Trilby, is faithful to the extent of murder. So he kills her captor. But the death of Svengali brings about the immediate death of the girl whose life has become a part of the hypnotism of the magician.

Pathe news and comedy finish the bill.

THEDA-BARA CLEVER 'CARMEN'

Majestic Crowds Fascinated by Story of Vampire.

There is more reality in Fox's "Carmen" playing this week at the Majestic, than has hitherto even been hoped for in the films. The great story of the fascinating Spanish senorita who lured Don Jose to destruction, is one that has been produced with remarkable adherence to the plot and beauty of the original.

Theda Bara, noted for her vampire roles, was never before as fascinating as in "Carmen."

A thread of humor runs through the production and is brought about by realistic bits of comedy that enliven the tragic play. The thrilling bull-fight leads up to the murder of "Carmen," by the man she wrecked and

"In 10 years from now walnut-growing will have been reduced to an exact and profitable science."

"Walnut trees should be grafted, budded, pruned and handled in every other way precisely as fruit trees are handled."

"The walnut-growing industry can be made just as important to the Northwest as fruitgrowing now is."

These are some of the declarations that Professor C. I. Lewis, chief of the division of horticulture at the Oregon Agricultural College, sought to impress upon delegates to the first annual convention of the Western Walnut Association at the Imperial Hotel yesterday afternoon.

Views on Industry Are Given.

Professor Lewis was the last of a number of speakers who related their experiences and advanced their views on the walnut-growing industry.

Walnut-growing, it was pointed out, is only in its infancy. There was much apparent conflict of opinion regarding the proper method of propagating walnuts. Some growers stuck to the seedling plan, while Professor Lewis and others protested that grafting is the best and most practicable method.

"In 10 years from now you won't even talk of seedlings," asserted Professor Lewis. "You will get down to four or five varieties of nuts well adapted to your local soil and climate, and you will propagate them by grafting."

The question of pollenization also came in for a large share of discussion. Ferd Groner, of Hillsboro, who is one of the most successful growers in the section, told the convention that most of his best results have been obtained without any apparent pollenization.

Results Are Declared Better.

While admitting that good results can be obtained without pollenization, Professor Lewis took the ground that better results will come from pollenization. "Nature encourages cross-breeding," was his observation.
