"VANITY FAIR" IS SHOWN Private Exhibition Given of Notable

Film That Is Soon to Be Run.

"Vanity Fair," with Mrz. Fiske as the little incorrigible adventuress, Becky Sharpe, received a private showning in Portland yesterday. The Edison. Kline feature is one of merit both from a standpoint of photography and as heat pictured and best preserved of all the quaint historic novels of the early 1808s. The play follows minutely the vivid novel by William Makepeace most brilliant of all English satires. The health of the condition.

The clary follows minutely the vivid novel by William Makepeace most brilliant of all English satires. The old English satires. The old English satires een clothed in realism that makes the old masterpiece regily a fact.

Ferhaps the most notable of all the scenes is the Battie of Waterloo. The ballroom scene of the dance at Brussels is an elaborate affair and well pictured. So vivid and so realistic are parts of the picture that its equal is seldem found. The photoplay, "Vanity Fair," will be played at one of the portland picture houses in the near future.

They do not loaf on the job and waste time gossiping, telling stories, or even walking around. They take their knitting, their crotcheting, sewing or fancy work with them, or perhaps her husband's socks, which they mend. During a primary election, especially, time hangs heavy as the voting is light, especially during the early hours of the day. So why waste all that valuable time. Some of the women take along good books or magazines and read these when they have nothing else to do. lse to do.

when a voter appears in the doorway, they drop their fancy work and get busy with the operation of state and when it has been announced that No. Blank has voted, they pick up their work where they have left off and are thus paid for working for themselves, as they save the time that would be lost otherwise.

Some of the men, it is said, have been figuring out some way to make an impression on the women, by occupying their time when serving on election boards, but to date no man here has solved the problem, or has taken up fancy work—in public.

The planes were taken on August 7 and disposed of about a month later. Farnham had been moving-picture operator at the theater before it was operator at the theater before it was closed and knew of the piano transaction. The theater went out of business in the Spring, but he knew that the pianos were still there. According to his own admissions he told F. E. Fruiht, of the Sellwood Transfer Company, that he had two pianos that he wished stored and asked him to take them from the theater.

This worked fine and he stored the pianos for a month with the Sellwood company. Then he told Fruiht that he wished to dispose of them and offered him one. Fruiht said he aiready had a piano and did not need another.

"This is a far better one, I'll take your old one in trade if you'll give me $30 to boot," said the young man. The trade was consumated. Farnham then sold the old nigno for $20 to Saleman. Jewelry, silverware and such stuff, easily pocketed and carried away, are the preference of most thieves, but in the confession of Charles Farnham, of 166 East Twentieth street, to Detectives Hellyer and Tackaberry and Deputy District Attorney Deich yesterday is revealed the theft and clever disposal of two such ungainly articles of loot as pianos.

A profit—no longer tangible—of $180 was made on the transaction by the young man, who is but 21.

The planos were the property of the Reed-French piano firm and were removed from a motion-picture house at Twentieth street and Hawthorne avenue, where they had been sent as prizes for a contest that was never heid.
