

HE HELL SHOW RUNS BUT FIGHT GOES ON

Regular Musicians Perform and Road Company Hands Care for Stage Work.

LABOR COUNCIL TO BE SUED

Union Officials Maintain Discharge of Engineer Was Irregular and Also Deny Strike Called at Eleventh Hour.

Despite the strike order that called the stagehands and the musicians out of the Heilig Theater on Thursday, the regular performance of "When Dreams Come True" was given at the Heilig last night without apparent difficulty.

The regular union musicians filled the orchestra pit, while the stage work was done by the road company's employees, assisted by "outside" help secured in Portland.

W. T. Pangle, manager of the Heilig, retained J. J. Fitzgerald, an attorney, to institute suit against the Central Labor Council and its officers for damages alleged to be due on account of the strike order which prevented the performance on Friday night.

William Mackenzie, of the Central Labor Council, declared last night that the Heilig Theater will be boycotted once for using nonunion men on the stage last night.

Orchestra Urged to Strike. The Central Labor Council also is urging the Heilig's orchestra to join in the strike. The musicians at the theater take the stand that the Central Labor Council has no jurisdiction in the case, and that they cannot be called out excepting by the officials of their own organization.

"I think that we can convince the musicians that it is their duty to strike," said Mr. Mackenzie last night. The union carpenters and other stage employees traveling with the "When Dreams Come True" company, are not involved in the strike, and continued to work last night.

H. C. Kammerer, the union stage carpenter with the show, as soon as the strike was called on Friday, telegraphed Charles C. Shay, president of the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees, for advice. Mr. Shay yesterday afternoon replied as follows:

"No one has a right to call you out except this office. Until such time as you are presented with the official call of the international you will continue to fill your position."

"I'll continue to work until I'm ordered out by the international officers," said Mr. Kammerer last night.

Old Difficulty Unsettled. Meanwhile, no efforts have been made to adjust the difficulty that caused the strike in the first place. It appears that the whole controversy arose over the Heilig's action in charging Hugh Shell, the engineer employed in the building, several months ago, when the theater building was connected with the steam-heating mains of the Northwestern Electric Company.

Manager Pangle took the stand that without a heating plant he had no use for an engineer. "We might as well have two orchestra leaders as an engineer without an engine for him to run and without even boilers for him to look after," said Mr. Pangle.

Mr. Mackenzie, who is head of the engineers' union, affiliated with the Central Labor Council, explains, however, that every building in the city connected with the Northwestern service employs an engineer. He points to the Orpheum Theater, as an example.

The plan of Mr. Pangle, said Mr. Mackenzie, "is to employ a janitor or someone at a lower wage and have him do the engine work. Everybody knows that there is nothing to do in every building, even though no heating service is maintained. Why, the Heilig always kept its engineer through the summer months and paid him, yet the heating plant was not operated in the summer time."

Trouble Dates From October. It seems, however, that the controversy over the engineer became complicated early in October, when Hugh Shell was formally discharged. The union insisted that the discharge was not valid, and that the man was employed for a single day and was paid $2.55. He received, however, for a full month's wages, with understanding that his services no longer would be required.

But the union officials continued to send the man to the theater every day. Mr. Pangle told him that he could not expect the Heilig to pay him his salary. The man said he understood this according to Mr. Pangle.

The controversy continued until the end of the month, when Mr. Pangle produced Mr. Shell's receipt for $3.25 showing that he had accepted payment for the month in full.

The union officials insisted that this proceeding was irregular, and that the man was violating union principles at the time he signed such a receipt.

Efforts to adjust the difficulty proved unavailing, and culminated, finally, in the strike.

Mr. Mackenzie denies the contention of Mr. Heilig that the theater manager was not notified of the strike until within half an hour before the time the show was scheduled to begin. He insists that Mr. Pangle was notified early Friday morning.

FIGHT IN MIDAIR IS SEEN

Seagulls Maneuver to Get Crow Skyward Before Striking. Those in the vicinity of the North Pacific Lumber Company's dock about 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning witnessed a fight in midair that gave some a keen idea of what a lone birdman in the war zone faces when pursued by a flock of the enemy's aeroplanes, the combatants in this instance being more proficient, however, as was a lone crow against a squad of seagulls.

Naturally, the preliminary issue is unknown, but apparently the black crow had transgressed on the laws of the gulls and one of the latter took after him, sending out an "S. O. S." call for his brethren, and soon two others joined the fight. They whirled, dipped, soared and dropped in keeping Mr. Crow on the move, always working higher and higher into the air until they tired the crow noticeably, whereupon one gull seemed to crack his beak soundly against the cranium of the crow, which dropped as though shot, falling into the water, where he was helpless. His startling finish frightened other crows in the vicinity, and they bled themselves to Swan Island.

Rabbit Show Date Set. The first pet stock show given by the newly organized Oregon Pet Stock Association for rabbits will be held in the Sellwood Y. M. C. A. building, at the corner of Spokane avenue and East Fifteenth street, November 17. This will be exclusively a table rabbit exhibition and all rabbit growers in the state are invited to place their rabbits on exhibition. C. S. Gibson, secretary of the National Pet Stock Association, will judge the rabbits at this table show and deliver a paper on the proper care and feeding of pets. Mr. Gibson is the judge of pet stock at the Panama Exposition. This will be the first show of the Oregon Pet Stock Association, but it is planned later to hold a more extensive show to include other pets beside rabbits.
