MARTIN WINCH DIES

8-Year Battle for Reed College Is Fatal Strain.
Fortune Was Given Up in Devotion to Idea of Founding School Provided For in Bequest and Heirs Fought Through Courts.

Death yesterday morning ended the career of a man whose unselfishness and high regard for the trust left in his keeping by Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Reed gave to Portland Reed College, and that man was Martin Winch.

Heitkemper Jewelry Store
A careful, reliable, dignified, all-the-year-round jewelry store that has grown slowly but surely, until today it takes its rank with the old-time exclusive jewelry stores, except in these two particulars:

Martin Winch, prominent realtor of Portland, who died yesterday.

legal battle, in which he, virtually alone among the heirs to the Reed estate, fought that his aunt's wishes might be carried out. Had the will been broken, he would have been one of the chief beneficiaries. For three years he had been falling in health and his illness became critical two months ago. Death came at 4:45 yesterday morning.

AN ENDOWMENT OF ABOUT $200,000 WAS left for the establishment of Reed College by Mrs. Amanda Reed. By endeavoring to prove that Mrs. Reed's legal residence was in California, and that, under the laws of that state, only $200,000 could be bequeathed for a school, heirs endeavored to break the will.

TO MAKE HIS WAY IN THE WORLD FOR HIMSELF, the age of 16, his school education ending there. His first employment was as office boy for the Oregon Steam Navigation Company. After his day's work for the railroad he conducted a printing business at night, being a man with a tremendous capacity for work.

THE YOUNG MAN TRUSTED IMPLICITLY by his uncle, who engaged him to look after his affairs—a $200,000 responsibility. So great was his uncle's confidence in him that he placed in his hands the management of the monthly statements submitted to him by his nephew was found to have been unopened, so certain was S. G. Reed that his affairs were not being mismanaged.

THE HEIRS WERE BUT SLIGHTLY REMEMBERED in the will, and Martin Winch was named as executor. There followed a legal battle lasting eight years, finally resulting in the preservation of the integrity of the will.

MR. WINCH WAS SURVIVED BY HIS wife and his sons, Simeon Reed Winch. The funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the residence, 241 Broadway, will be conducted by Dr. William Elliot, pastor of the First Unitarian Church. At the grave, Portland lodge of Masons, No. 55, will have charge. The pallbearers have not been determined, but among them will be Judge H. E. McGinn, William Ladd, S. M.
