WELL-KNOWN PORTLAND GIRL WHOSE WEDDING LAST NIGHT PROVES GENUINE SURPRISE.

Mrs. Henry Renshaw Dobney

HOLIDAY time is always full of surprises, this year particularly being fraught with unusual developments. One of the most genuine surprises of the week was the wedding of Miss Florence Westergaard and Richard Renshaw Dobney, which was performed last night at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. C. P. Westergaard, in Starwood Drive, King's Heights. The ceremony was attended only by members of both families, the service being read by Rev. Luther R. Eyring. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Melba Westergaard, and Clifford R. Dobney, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. Miss Westergaard sang "Because." Following the ceremony, which was read at 4 o'clock, an elaborate supper was served. The house was attractively decorated with seasonal blossoms, orchids and maidenhair ferns in an artistic basket adorning the supper table. The drawing-room was attractive with masses of many chrysantheums, palms and ferns, the hall being decked with huge baskets of woodwardia ferns.

The bride is an attractive girl, wears a lovely gown of ivory-toned tulle, trimmed with rare old rose point lace, her tulle veil being worn with a shower of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Westergaard was attired in pale blue chiffon and satin, with black velvet gloves.

The bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Renshaw, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Renshaw, his sisters, Misses Eleanor, Virginia, Doris, Charlotte, and brother, Clifford, also were in the wedding party.

Mrs. Westergaard was groomed in rose-colored satin and filmy lace and she wore a corsage of violets.

The young people left last night for a trip to the coast and later will go to California for a short stay. On their return they will be at home at the Westergaard home.

Mrs. Dobney is well known as a pianist and has frequently appeared in concerts and recitals in and around Portland. She, with her sister, received her musical education abroad and is very popular in her set.

Mr. Dobney is a Stanford man, a member of Eta Kappa Phi fraternity, and is associated with his father in business. The young people have been engaged for several months, but did not divulge their secret even to their closest friends.

STYLE TIPS FROM PORTLAND STORES

THE high crowned hat is by no means holding the most coveted place in fashion. The fact that to the average woman it is unbecoming has been largely responsible for its passing. Local shops are rapidly receiving bonnet-like hats and "sane" hats that are neither too small, too high, nor too large. The extremely small hat, perched at a "dashing" angle between the ear and eye, is also being driven out by the newer and more sensible style. The fluffy edged hat which has had a timely run is being revived and its future popularity is insured by its attractiveness.

Malines, loads and loads of it, is being brought to Portland for bonnets and hats, modeled after those by foreign and Eastern modists. An innovation in malines is a new silver and gold colored material which is soft, shimmering and substantial.

To what heights of artistry the milliners will soar in this new wealth of opportunity is yet to be discovered; at any rate they are displaying little that is new and bold. The open crowns with veiled edgings and fur are still popular.

The softest of pan velvet with a silvery, pussy, willow shen or soft pearl velvet can be beautifully combined with silver trimmings or fur, as has been demonstrated by some of the milliners who are displaying little pleated hats with edges of gold and silver and mysterious little puffs or strips of fur. A pale yellow hat with her hair trimmings is not to be regarded as too venturesome, for it merely comes as a sequel to numbers of other things that are being shown in channels, modeled after the little rose-colored hat with a place all its own in one with modish lines and a standing up pleating of stiff maline and a wee bit of a frill about the face.

THE SANDMAN STORY

By Mrs. F. A. Walker

Princess Terrible.
Once upon a time there lived a King who had a very beautiful daughter. Her hair hung in golden curls and her cheeks were the color of peach blossoms. The King had selected for her husband a Prince who owned vast lands and handsome castles, but the Princess did not want to marry him because he was not a good man.

"I do not love him," she would say when her father spoke of the Prince as her future husband.

"Do you want to be an old maid?" her father would ask.

"I do not wish to marry," the Princess would reply, "until I meet the man I can love and respect, and someone like the sweetest ladies I know are old maids, as you call them."

But the King was not to be put off in this manner and the day was set for the wedding. The poor little Princess begged and pleaded, but her father was firm; she must marry the Prince he had selected.

One night when everybody in the castle was asleep the Princess stole out very softly. She went to the cave of an old witch in the woods.

"Mother Witch," she said, "do help me; I cannot marry the Prince. I do not love him." The old witch told her she could help her, but she must promise not to blame her for anything that happened afterward.

"Anything will be better than marrying a man I do not love," the Princess replied. The old witch hobbled into her cave and returned with a white tablet and a tiny phial which held red liquid.

"Go home," she told the Princess, "and let them prepare for your wedding; do not fret or find fault. On your wedding night after you are dressed, take this tablet, drop this red liquid on it and swallow it at once. The Prince will not want you for his wife. I will promise you that."

The Princess thanked her and went back to the castle, feeling very happy. The night of the wedding when she was dressed in her bridal gown and the veil had been pinned in place, she asked to be left alone for a little while. As soon as she was left by herself she took from a secret drawer the tablet her breakfast they dropped the dishes, they were so surprised and overjoyed, for there was their daughter as beautiful as she ever had been.

The King gave a ball in honor of her recovery from what he felt sure was some terrible malady, and all the people from miles around were invited, Prince and young men who were of lowly station.

The King hoped that the Princess would choose a husband, but she said, "No," she would remain single and live with her father and mother, and when they were old they were glad she had not left them.

And the King found that the unmarried daughter was a greater blessing than she would have been had she married as he wished.

ELEVATOR TIME EXTENDED

Six Months Is Allowed for Safety Repairs Under Ordinance.

The City Council yesterday passed an emergency ordinance granting six months' extension of time from January 1 in which owners of buildings where automatic elevators are installed shall have to build in safeguards as outlined in an ordinance passed by the Council several months ago. The delay in enforcement of the ordinance was granted because all the changes required by the ordinance could not be made within the time given.

The ordinance is aimed to make the automatic lifts safer. The principal change is the requiring of all doors to be flush with the elevator shaft and requiring the removal of projections in the shaft.

LIQUOR SALE NOT PUNISHED

Jury Does Not Convict Druggist on "Spotter's" Testimony.

That the jury in the case against R. C. Barkman, druggist, did not convict him on a charge of bootlegging on evidence obtained and submitted by the Princess was indicated by the verdict it returned yesterday in Circuit Judge McGinn's court.

John Cummins was the complaining witness and informer in the case. He brought the whiskey from Barkman, representing that his wife was ill. The jury returned to the court for special instructions with reference to the reputation of the druggist, which appeared to be good.
