

WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY EDITH KNIGHT HOLMES

THE Portland Women's Union began the New Year with a meeting yesterday at the Anna Lewis Hall. Committee of membership, finance, house, industrial school, publicity and printing read preliminary reports. Mrs. J. B. Knapp presided. The chief matter of discussion was the opening of the Anna Lewis Hall to girls not residing at the hall for luncheon. Yesterday saw the opening of the public luncheon, and a large number of girls availed themselves of the opportunity. It seems as if the idea, which was promulgated by a number of the large women's houses in that district, would be a success. Two establishments are to lengthen their noon time for the girls from three-quarters of an hour to one hour, so that the girls may go to the hall and get hot food and have the advantage of the library and rest rooms.

Chapter A. P. E. O., was entertained New Year's eve at the home of Mrs. W. F. Greer at her Laddington Court home. Honors were won by Mrs. William Hull and G. W. Moxley. At midnight Mrs. G. W. Moxley called on Mayor Albion, who delivered the New Year's talk. William Hull and J. P. Greer also spoke. W. F. Jones told stories.

The Shakespeare department of the Portland Women's Club met yesterday and studied "King Lear." The early part of the meeting was devoted to an open discussion of current happenings in the world of drama.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Helen Miller from the department of public speaking of the Coterie Club held a meeting at the Imperial Hotel yesterday.

Miss Claire Oaks was hostess to the West Side Shakespeare Study Club at her home, 401 East Taylor street. "Twelfth Night" was studied and discussed.

During the holidays Miss Florence A. Sullivan, president of the Emerson Study Club, entertained the members with a delightful Christmas entertainment.

The club resumes its regular study tonight at 8 o'clock. The year's "Twelfth Night" will be the subject.

One of the big affairs of tomorrow will be the Coterie Club luncheon at the Imperial Hotel at 11 o'clock. A trio will be sung by Mrs. Florence Hammond, Mrs. G. F. Alexander and Mrs. R. G. Sullivan. Mrs. Newman and Mrs. Edward R. Hunt will have poems on Robert Hubbard. During the luncheon, which will be served at 12:30, a three-minute talk will be given by Mrs. B. T. Gledhill on "What Our Talk Should Mean to Us." Roll-call will be responded to with poems from the works of Hubbard. "My Favorite Hamlet" will be discussed by Mrs. C. M. Hargrave and Mrs. E. H. Covert will talk of "The Value of Humor."

Prominent women from the Portland Women's Club will leave this morning for Corvallis as delegates to the Home-makers' convention. Mrs. J. D. Spencer will read a paper on "The Emerson Study Club." Mrs. E. M. Sullivan, Mrs. Clara Waldo, Mrs. John M. Scott and Mrs. Grace Wall Ross will leave this morning.

The regular meeting of the Vernon Parent-Teacher Association will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Vernon School principal, Mrs. A. L. Leavelle, will speak. A meeting of the executive board will be held in the principal's office at 3 o'clock.

"The Bible as Literature" will be the response to railroad at the meeting of the Women's Fictional Science Club this afternoon at the Central Library. The meeting will take place at 3 o'clock and A. L. Baker, president of the Oregon State Anti-Slavery League, will talk on "Our Prohibition Law." Beginning today the club will give a series of practical and systematic parliamentary drills at each of their regular meetings at 1:30, 2:30, 3:30, 4:30, 5:30, 6:30 and 7:30 o'clock. Between 2:30 and 3 o'clock the business meeting will be in session.

Because of the chess play rehearsal, the meeting of the Woodlawn Parent-Teacher Association which was to have taken place yesterday has been postponed for next week.

"A Got Acquainted Social" will be given by the Franklin High School Parent-Teacher Association at the Creston School tonight at 8 o'clock. Superintendent Alderman will speak.

Mrs. E. L. Hanson will be hostess to the Tuesday Afternoon Club at her home, 414 East Fifty-seventh street, this afternoon. As a thoroughly novel diversion the members have planned a grab-bag entertainment.

The Women's New Thought Club will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Flora Peterson, 79 Cornell Street.

"True Charity" was the theme on which E. R. Coulter addressed the Alberta Women's Improvement League at the meeting at the Vernon School last night.

Mrs. Hattie Wilson, president of the Central Women's Christian Temperance Union, will preside over a mothers' meeting at the W. C. T. U. headquarters, 1715 Eleventh street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Robert Tate and Mrs. Ada Carsh will also speak.

THE SANDMAN STORY

By Mrs. F. A. Walker

Sunshine and Clouds.

ONCE upon a time there were two sisters. One was called Sunshine, because she was so cross looking and had a kind word for everyone.

The other sister was called Clouds, because she was so cross looking and never had a pleasant word for anyone. Sunshine and Clouds lived with their uncle, who was a miser, and when they grew up he thought they ate too much, so one morning he gave each of them a pill filled with food and told them they must go away and earn their living.

They walked a long distance the first day without finding work, when it came night they sat under a tree to eat their supper.

"Let us eat the food from your pill first," said Clouds, "and then we can throw away the pill and only have one pill to carry."

Sunshine thought this was a good plan and let her sister eat first. She ate all the food from her pill, and then next morning they ate from Sunshine's pill also, and when night came they were still without a place to sleep, and Sunshine's pill was empty.

Clouds sat down to eat her supper, but she did not offer her sister anything to eat, and when Sunshine asked her for something she replied: "If you were silly enough to give away your share, do not think I am silly also. I shall keep this for myself."

Sunshine cried herself to sleep that night more because of her sister's unkindness than because she was hungry, and the next morning when she awoke she found herself alone. Clouds had gone away before she was awake.

Four Sunshine walked all day and asked at each door for work, but none could she find, and she was afraid to sleep under a tree alone, so she crawled between two rocks and pulled from her hiding place, she saw some queer-looking little creatures sitting on the ground. They were the little brown men and they were talking of the King who lived in a big castle not far away.

"I could tell him what would restore his daughter's sight," said one, "but what good would it do for me to go to the castle? I am so small that they would not see me, and if they did I do not know what would happen. No, I am not going to take any such risk, but I will tell you what would cure her."

"What is it?" asked one.

"If the Princess would get up early in the morning and go into the woods while the dew is still on the bushes and eat a cupful of the dew and then find the well of fire that is on the top of the mountain and not the new to hold over it, and when it is cool drink it, that would cure her."

Sunshine listened, and when the little brown men went away she remembered what she had heard, and the next morning she ate some berries and started for the castle, where the blind Princess lived.

"I want to see the King," said Sunshine when she came to the castle and opened the gate of the castle she found a servant.

"What do you want with the King?" asked the King's servant.

"That I cannot tell you," replied Sunshine, "but you must let me see him or the little Princess will always be blind."

When the servant heard that he let

Sunshine in, for everyone loved the little Princess.

When Sunshine told the King the cure she had learned from the little brown men he did not have much faith, but he wished to try everything, and so one morning the little Princess set out with Sunshine and gathered the dew in a cup.

All day they walked, for it was a long way to the top of the mountain, and just as the sun was going down they came to the well of fire. There was a grating over the top and on this the little blind Princess, guided by Sunshine, placed the cup, and as soon as the dew below Sunshine took it off to cool it.

"Drink it now," she said when it was cool enough.

The little Princess drank, and in a few minutes she said, "I see a beautiful bright light; what is it?"

"That is the sun setting," said Sunshine. "You can see now, and the world will always look bright to you, for you will no longer be blind."

Sunshine took the little Princess back to the castle, where the King was waiting, and when he knew that his daughter's sight had been restored he held a feast and told everyone how Sunshine had cured the Princess and that in return for this he intended to make her his daughter also.

In the midst of the feast a servant came to the King and said that a girl had been found by the side of the castle wall faint from the want of food, and when they brought her in Sunshine saw it was her sister, Clouds.

"But she did not tell the King how selfish Clouds had been to her; she only said: 'She is my sister; we were lost in the woods.'"

When Clouds heard how kind and unselfish her sister was she became ashamed of herself and determined to be like her, so for the sake of Sunshine she King advised both of them, and they lived at the castle with the little Princess and grew up to be good and useful women.

The Latest Word in Living.

PEOPLE are apt to ask the visitor to the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, "What most impressed you there?"

It is a common query and the answers are various. They are decidedly interesting, too, for they are apt to be a sidelight upon the personality of the one replying.

But upon one or two of the points most of the visitors are unanimous. One of these is the remarkable beauty of the Exposition. Not only is the lay visitor thus impressed, but some of the most famous artists and art critics of the world say that for sheer beauty of architecture, landscape gardening, setting and color effects, the Exposition has no equal. Nowhere in the world, say these who have traveled, is there within similar compass of space so fair a sight for the eyes to rest upon.

Another verdict upon which most are agreed is the beauty and novelty of the lighting effects. The soft, radiant glow of light that floods the place without any one strong disturbing note is one of the enchantments of the exposition. There is nothing glaring or theatrical about it. It steals upon your senses of sight with a soft, mysterious charm as delightful as intangible as the delicate perfume of unseen flowers that scent the wandering breeze at night.

And there is yet another point upon which many are agreed, as the thing that most impressed them at the exposition. And this is as one of the visitors expressed it: "The exposition is the latest word in living. You do not get the past here," she said, "you get the present. But most of all, you feel the future."

It is very true, and it is wonderfully inspiring. For the future that you feel, as you look at the present at the exposition, is a very happy future, a future in which the welfare of man and the right of every individual to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness seems to be carefully considered and considered in a spirit that has never before so universally ruled.

It seems almost as if the exposition authorities had said, "Yes, the past is very interesting. It has done some wonderful things in art and other matters. We are not disparaging it. But let us look at today and tomorrow."

And so you see what the greatest industrial institutions of the country are doing for one who wants to labor. What you see is of course the social and welfare work they are doing for their laborers. But it is not done in
