VICTIMS in the city are receiving practically all of the social comments this week, as Miss Helen Thomas, a vivacious and charming San Francisco girl, who is the house guest of Miss Fatsy Stewart, being home from the pretty informal tea for which Mrs. Wheelwright was hostess yesterday. The attractive tea table was presided over by Mrs. Fatsy Stewart, assisted by Mrs. William Washburn, of Minneapolis.

Today Miss Holman will share honors with Miss Helen Thomas, as the luncheon to be presided over by Miss Genevieve Brooke, and tomorrow both ladies again will be honored guests for the luncheon for which Miss Ruth Teal will be hostess.

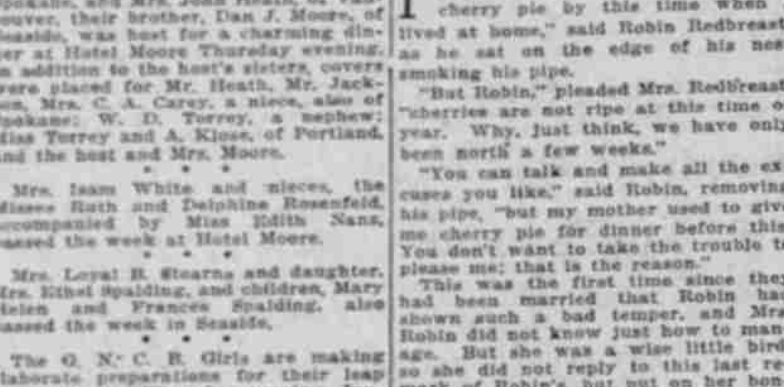

On Friday night Graham Glass, Jr., has planned one of the dinner parties at the University Club, at which he will honor Miss Redwell; a luncheon will be an event of Saturday with Mrs. Hazel H. Litt as hostess, honoring Miss Holman, and Sunday afternoon Mrs. Brooke has planned a tea to honor her house guest, and her sister, Miss Caroline Redwell, also of Victoria, who is expected to reach here Wednesday to visit the Brookses. In the evening Miss MacMaster will entertain with an informal supper party at her home in Ardmore for the young folk.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheelwright were dinner hosts Monday night honoring General and Mrs. Max P. Mass, who are leaving to return to their home in California. Mrs. Wheelwright was hostess during their dinner here. Additional guests were Colonel and Mrs. C. E. Wood, Miss Mary F. Peeling and Hugh Holme.

Raven, for she was really frightened; poor Robin seemed so ill. Dr. Raven came in a hurry with his black bag of medicals. "You are very sick; very sick indeed, Robin. I should say you had eaten something that did not agree with you. Now what have you been eating, sir? What have you been eating?"

"Cherry pie at this time of the year," exclaimed Dr. Raven. "Why, bless my soul, Robin, you must be crazy."

Dr. Raven opened his black bag and took out three bottles. Each one held a mixture that looked as though it tasted very bad.

"Poor Robin looked at them as the doctor poured them into a glass. "Drink that," he said, handing it to Robin.

Robin tasted and shook his head. "I can't take that," he said. "It is awful. A sharp pain doubled him up just then and he drank the rest of the medicine without a word.

"There, I think that will fix him," said Dr. Raven, putting on his hat. "I guess he will not ask for cherry pie again very soon, Mrs. Redbreast, and if he does, don't you give it to him, do you hear, George Jackson, G. A. Benedict, I. C. Cunningham and J. C. English. "Tell Me the Secret"

How do you make such delicious muffins? Mine are always so dry. And if I make the batter thin they fall. How do you do it?

"I make them about as you do, only I use K.C. Baking Powder. Mine always turn out well, so it must be the baking powder."

It is the baking powder. To make muffins, cakes and pastry rich and moist, yet light and feathery, a modern double acting baking powder must be used—one that will give off leavening gas in the oven as well as in the mixing bowl.

K.C. BAKING POWDER

is really a blend of two baking powders, one of which starts to raise as soon as moisture is added. The other is inactive until heat is applied. This sustains the raise until your muffins, biscuits or cake is done.

K.C. Baking Powder costs less than the old fashioned quick acting kinds, yet you need use no more and it is superior to them in every way.

Because They Had Money.

A FINE gray limousine drove up in front of the Summer resort hotel and a party of motorists alighted. They were simply dressed and quite unostentatious in their manner. In fact, so far as appearance went, the car was quite the most magnificent part of the outfit. Indeed, so truly superb was it that the crowd on the hotel porch watching the arrival decided that they were "somebody," and one, out of curiosity, sauntered in and examined the register.

"Millionaires from New York," he announced when he joined his friends, and mentioned a name rather well known for wealth.

Amongst the party and their things were the focus of all eyes. When they entered the dining-rooms that night there were few present who did not study them. It was the richest party that had ever been seen in the hotel. The man who had accompanied them was a cross-country automobile tour and could relate some of their adventures with a listless eagerness. The morning dresses were scanned the way the women did their hair, the cutting garb they wore—all came in for a share of attention and gossip. And when, after a large day's drive, they motored away, a large party of the hotel guests "departed" with them.

And all because they had money.

Had Mrs. Tom Jones, of Smithville, driven up in her car, she would scarcely have been noticed. Even had she done something even more worth while than had any of these women, her arrival would probably have caused little comment.

For these folks had done nothing but inherit money. They had never demonstrated any special ability in any way. They had inherited it in any money.

Particularly noteworthy way. They were quiet, well-bred people and very likely the attention focused upon them had been noticed. Even had they inherited their money huge piles of it, the eyes of their fellows were always turned toward them. What they did, what they ate, what they wore, were considered worthy of comment.

We do not worship money quite as much as we did a decade or so ago. But we still give it a good deal of our homage. Do we not? Just let it be known that a person has money, and especially if he has a bunch of it, and immediately his dress, his manner of living, the furnishings of his house, everything, in fact, that has to do with him becomes a matter of study. And all because he
