

NEW PARK ORDER REACHES PORTLAND

National Playground Along Columbia River Highway to Be Improved at Once.

TWO DESIRED POINTS WON

Chamber Now Will Concentrate on Final Measure Sought, Which Is for Construction of Driveway to Encircle Mount Hood.

The Columbia Gorge Park division of the Oregon National forest is the Christmas present that has been handed to the Portland Chamber of Commerce by D. F. Huston, secretary of Agriculture.

The announcement of the land classification order that places the Government forest along the Columbia Highway in a National park, and which carries with it provisions for the funds necessary for beginning the immediate development of it as a National park, was signed by Secretary Huston and was received by the Chamber of Commerce in Portland yesterday morning.

The members of the Chamber to persuade the Government to set aside these lands for park purposes was begun last summer, when a formal request was sent, July 2, for the classification of the Government lands along the Columbia River Highway for a National reserve.

Chief Forester H. R. Graves was in Portland on August 12 and after making the trip over the highway expressed his enthusiastic belief that there would be no trouble in getting the matter through.

The lands were classified and segregated actually on July 27, although the details through which the matter had to go did not permit of the Secretary's signature until December 24.

This order makes the great movement that the Chamber has taken up in connection with the Columbia Highway successful in its first two points, and the campaign is now launched upon the third and final point, a movement for the construction of a 18-mile loop road through the National reserve to connect the Columbia Highway and Hood River Valley road with the Harlow road and Powell Valley road, making it possible to encircle Mount Hood in a continuous automobile trip.

The first two steps in the campaign were to have the National park reserve set aside, and to have the reserve thus set aside definitely developed for the purpose of public recreation.

Booklets of Columbia Highway pictures have been sent from the Chamber to Chief Forester Graves and to T. Warren Allen, who made the survey trip over the Mount Hood loop road on August 12.

Similar booklets have been sent to Representative Markham and other members of the campaign for the proposed road will be carried forward zealously until this third step in the campaign is successful.

The committee that has handled the campaign for the Chamber consists of Amos Benson, Henry Olmstead, T. H. Sheppard, H. R. Shelby and Jacob Kanbar.

Already many requests have been received from different organizations for engagements for lectures illustrated with the Berger-Jones pictures.

The Curtis Publishing Company has written asking that a definite date, when Mr. Berger and Mr. Jones can appear and give their lecture in Philadelphia, be named. It is planned that the pictures shall be sent to Washington and shown there as a part of the campaign in behalf of the proposed road around Mount Hood in the National Park.

Several universities of the East have signified their desire to arrange for lectures.

That H. Huenada, Japanese tenant on a farm near Gresham, on a funeral pyre of grape stakes, two months ago burned the body of an infant, together with the carcasses of several pigs that had died of disease, is the information that reached Deputy District Attorney Samuel H. Pierce yesterday.

A report advising investigation was made to Dr. David N. Roberg, secretary to the State Board of Health. If the child was dead—and there is no evidence to the contrary—it was a violation of the 1915 law requiring the disposal of the body with the State Board of Health. The penalty is a fine of from $10 to $100.

Plumbers, builders and others interested in the City's proposed new plumbing code will have an opportunity tomorrow at 10 o'clock to speak either for or against the provisions of the new code, when the proposed measure goes before the City Council at a special meeting.

The measure as proposed by the plumbing code revision committee outlines the methods of installing fixtures. Among the more important provisions is one establishing a system of plumbing permits. It will be necessary to obtain a permit before doing any plumbing work and to pay a fee for the permit.

BOYS ARE KILLING BIRDS

STATE GAME WARDEN WARNS AGAINST PRACTICE.

Christmas Airguns and Small Rifles May Cause Arrests of Owners.

Housewives Feed Songsters.

Christmas airguns and small caliber rifles in the hands of boys are said to be taking a serious toll of bird life in the city and its environs.

State Game Warden Schoenmaker and his deputies have had their attention called to the slaughter and it is said an example will be made of some of the young sportsmen if the practice does not stop.

The officers call on parents to prevent boys from killing song birds and game birds. If this is not done, they say they will cause the arrest of the lads.

The season has been peculiarly adapted to shooting song birds, say the officers, because they stay close to houses on account of the snowfall. Pheasants, too, are falling victims to the young riflemen. There is a stringent law against even molesting birds protected by the game laws of the state, and all incorporated cities are game refuges.

The request of W. L. Finley, State Biologist, that food be placed out of doors for song birds while snow covers the ground is finding a liberal response throughout the city.

TRIBUTE PAID MR. WINCH

REED COLLEGE STUDENTS HONOR LATE BENEFACTOR.

Efforts to Preserve Endowment in Legal Fight That Hastened His Death Are Reviewed.

Reed College paid tribute yesterday morning to the memory of Martin Winch, to whom the institution has been indebted for its existence.

Locally the entire faculty and student body gathered in the chapel in honor of the man whose efforts had preserved the Reed College endowment by his legal struggle to maintain the will of Mrs. Amanda Reed.

Dr. T. L. Elliot, president of the board of trustees and lifelong friend of Mr. Winch, delivered the address. He characterized Mr. Winch as a man of "unfailing integrity, highest honor and loyal devotion." In an earnest appreciation he told the students the story of Mr. Winch's four-year legal struggle to preserve the Reed and the strain of which broke his health and hastened his death.

The endowment of Reed College would have lost $250,000 if it had been broken," said Dr. Elliot, "and Mr. Winch would have been one of the chief beneficiaries, but he never swerved in his steadfast efforts to preserve it intact, as the Reeds had wished."

Dr. Elliot also related Mr. Winch's services to the college during his term as trustee. During this time he made an extended trip through the East and studied education methods for the benefit of Reed College entirely at his own cost.
