VIOLIN IN DEATH-GRIP

WASHINGTON, 70, FOUND LIFELESS IN HOME. German, Whose Wife Refused to Cross Ocean With Him, Never Forgets Bride of His Youth.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Alone in his hermit-like home at 1540 New Jersey avenue Northwest, where he lived for years a life of seclusion, Julius Schultz, 70 years old, a well-known musician, picked up his violin and played.

The discovery that he was dead was made by James Linney, 426 Q street Northwest. The youth had gone to the house to find a bottle of milk on the doorstep, left there early in the morning. Mr. Linney broke open a rear door and found the aged musician dressed, lying dead across his bed.

Mr. Linney accompanied his son to Schultz's home Tuesday night to hear the body played a piece on the violin. After the selection had been rendered by young Linney, the venerable musician picked up his violin and played, with touching pathos, "In the Gloaming," a piece that always carried him back to the memories of the Fatherland and his wife and other loved ones.
