is Gus Fisher, veteran Pertland catcher, going to be a victim of the reduced Pacific Coast League salary limit?

When one considers that Fisher hit for an average of $18 last season it would not seem likely. However, remarks dropped lately by the McCredies about the reclaiming of Claude Berry and the primising outlook for the making good of the youngsters, Fish, Black and Bartheismy, coupled with the desire of the Portland owners to keep within the new salary limit of $4500.

and Barthelemy, coupled with the desire of the Portland owners to keep within the new salary limit of $4500, causes a strong suspicion.

It is generally known that the singging backstop has a big contract with the McCredies, and it is almost a certainty that he would not play for less than he received last season. Something is due to break within a few days, according to Judge W. W. McCredie's remark of yesterday: "We may be forced to get rid of one of our veteran catchers. The $500 reduction in the salary limit will make us shave the salaries of some of our high-priced men, and Fisher and Carisch have about the fattest contracts among the lot."

Fred Carisch turned down a $5000 per season contract with the Federal League when he came to Fortland last season, so he must have a good-sized contract with the Beavers.

He seceived a letter from Owen Quinn, who is coming to the Beavers from the Syracuse club in the New York State League, saying that he hit 187 there last season instead of 187, which the record book shows. "That Meamerizing Melody." That Meamerizing Melody."

The campaign of ten Springs ago first started the reiteration of a phrase which lifted Franklin Parnassus Adams to additional renown. Many a Giant batsman of the old days recalls it—

Tinker to Evers to Chance.

In case you have forgotten Mr. Adams lyric, we will try and reproduce from memory:

These are the saddest of possible words, Thicker to Evere to Chance!
Tribe of heateans and fleeter than birds. Tinker and Evers and Coance; Pricking rethiesaly our gonfalon bubble. Making a Giant hit into a double. Words that are heavy with nothing but trouble.
Thicker to Evers to Chance.

These three will start the 1916 campaign about as far spart as the U. S. of A could place them. One is on the Atlantic Coast, another on the Pacific Coast and the third will operate in a section far from either ocean. Los Angeles, Chicago, Boston. Not even the pegging arms they carried ten years aso could complete a double play at this distance today. this distance today.

Among those who are not saying "Isn't it a pity that Jack Dillon doesn't weigh 25 pounds more?" are Jess Willard and Frank Moran.

That season the Cubs played 74 road games, of which they won 60 and lost 14, for a road percentage of $11. Certainly in modern baseball—from 1899 on, this mark has neves been touched. The Cubs did better ou the road that season than at home. The only home club that made any showing against Chance's team was the tail-end delegation from Boston, that achieved four victories out of 11 games. No other home club won over two out of 11.

Mention of the old Cubs always Mention of the old Cuba always brings up the argument as to which was the greater or more effective in-field—Chance, Evers, Tinker and Stein-feldt—or McGinnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. Seize your own choice.
