royal palace, which is for the King and his family alone?"

"I will not tell you," replied Janco, just remembering what his father had told him.

"Oh, it is all up with us, I fear," whispered the King to the Princess, "unless you are willing to marry Janco," for he had noticed with what looks of admiration Janco had been gazing upon her.

"Indeed, I would just love to marry him, papa," replied the Princess. "I do not care for the King, but I do care for the brave, fierce men."

Then the King told Janco that he would give him the Princess for a wife and make him the first Prince of the kingdom and let him come and go about the palace just like one of the family if he would keep the 60-foot giant and the 10,000 long-knived men away and promise not to do any fighting himself. Janco, who had been expecting to be arrested for a tramp, was so astonished at this offer that at first he could not reply, but as soon as he got his breath he readily agreed, as you would have done had you been a youth and seen the beautiful Princess.

And so they all lived happily, for although Janco was a fool, he had sense enough to keep his mouth shut at the right time, which is more than many wise folks have.

Two Remarkable Families.

A RATHER unusual family life was told me the other day and I pass it on to my reader friends, for it seems to me there is much in it for us to think about.

In New York State are two families who live together in a big farmhouse, each family occupying one end of the house. The two families have been brought together in this fashion through the friendship of the two men of the house.

It is not unusual for two families to live together in one house, nor for two men to be friends. But there is much more to the life of these two families than this.

The men, in business parlance, would probably be called partners. But there is no legal partnership and there is no talk of partnership between them. They are friends, that is all.

But friendship to them means this: They farm the big farm in common. They put all the revenue from it into a common fund in the bank. And they and their families draw upon this fund without questioning. Each takes according to his need.

They haven't done this for merely a few years, but for 40 years or more. And all this time there has been no unpleasantness, no accusations or recriminations, no feeling that perhaps one is getting more than the other. And this applies not only to the men themselves, but to their families.

Rather wonderful, isn't it?

There are several members of each family, boys and girls, who are well trained. The men in one has passed away and the eldest daughter is the housekeeper. It is not, you see, a case of absolute blind obedience to the will of the head of the house, for every member of each family has freedom to express his individuality. Yet there is no friction. The same household rule the families that obtain between the two men who brought this unusual and delightful state of affairs about.

Knowing human nature as it is, many of us would say such a method of living would be impossible. But facts prove it possible. Upon what basis, then, is it possible? Is it not upon the love that "seeketh not her own?"

Love of the purest kind must obtain in both these homes, must it not, and reign in the heart of every one there. There must be absolute unselfishness, which is, after all, love, on the part of every one and then good comes to all.

Who each one seeketh not his own, then no injustice is done to any. If some few members of these families were unselfish and self-sacrificing but others were not, then it would be from the material point of view, as if some were getting more than others, though I am inclined to believe that the love which is the basis of this life would be of one mind and that mind would have no trace of self in it there would be friction.

For instance, if the daughter of one house draws $50 from bank to pay for a dress and the daughter of the other household only draws $5, the daughter of the first house is getting more than the other. If the daughter of the first house is getting more than the other, then the daughter of the first house is getting more than the other. But here are from eight to ten people, all different in temperament and ambition, living on this basis.

Does it not go to show that human nature is capable when the highest motive motive—unselfish love, and do not the harmony and peace and happiness of these two families point to the fact that much of friction and discontent and dissatisfaction could be dropped from our lives if we would let the love that "seeketh not her own" rule?

original ideas were noted in the way the titles were interpreted.

Among the books represented were: "Samantha at Saratoga," "A Grain of Dust," "The Silver Horde," "Innocence Abroad," "The Lady of the Decoration," "The Blue Bird," "The White Lilies," "The Bent Twig," "Freckles," "A Boy of Orange," "The Gray Cloak," "The Wedding Ring," "Initials Only," "Charge It!" and "Lavender and Old Lace."

In a guessing game Mrs. A. M. Smith was successful. Mrs. J. A. Harrison won honors in the old-fashioned spelling bee.

The bright days are calling the clubwomen out and the club meetings are well attended. Today the Overlook Woman's Club will assemble in the room of Mrs. A. M. Stockie, 405 Maryland avenue. The hour set is 2:30 o'clock. This will be Child Welfare day. Judge Gatens will give an address and there will be some attractive music. Rollcall will be from favorite authors. The departments of the Portland Woman's Club will meet. Psychology, 2 o'clock; art, 2 o'clock; literature, 2:15 o'clock.

Summer Woman's Relief Corps will give a benefit concert on Monday night and Tuesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, for the benefit of the G. A. R. veterans' fund. Wilma Goodwin, harpist; Maurice Warner, violinist, and Lee Cronican, pianist, will present an attractive programme. The women are hoping that their friends will assist them in making the benefit a success in that the fund will be used for the old soldiers.

Saturday will be benefit day for Child Welfare. Tags will be sold under the auspices of the Congress of Mothers. The Kenton Parent-Teacher Association will give a concert at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, for the benefit of the G. A. R. veterans' fund. The women are hoping that their friends will assist them in making the benefit a success in that the fund will be used for the old soldiers.

THE SANDMAN STORY

By MRS. FAWALKER

Janco's Silence—Part II.

WHEN the trusty Generals came to Janco they saw the spur and said:

"Why do you carry that spur?"

"I am waiting for a swift steed with a suit of golden armor and a golden lance," replied Janco, forgetting what his father had told him about answering questions. Of course, this frightened the trusty Generals very much, for they were soldiers and thought that he must intend to fight if he was waiting for armor and lance. So they asked him again:

"Why do you want a suit of armor and a swift steed?"

"I will not tell you that," replied Janco, for he just then remembered his father's caution about answering questions.

Now, although the trusty Generals were very brave and experienced men of war, this frightened them very much, for they were soldiers and thought that he must intend to fight if he was waiting for armor and lance. So they asked him again:

"Why do you want a suit of armor and a swift steed?"

"I will not tell you that," replied Janco, for he just then remembered his father's caution about answering questions.

Then he clad himself in his royal robes and called his beautiful daughter, for he knew that beauty would soften the hardest heart. And he mounted his war chariot so that he would look down, though it was a bumpy old affair without springs, and he would have much preferred his new automobile. But he just had to look down, you see, in order to impress Janco with the fact of what a great King he was. When he and the Princess came to Janco sitting on the side of the road he saw the key hanging at Janco's belt.

"What is that key you wear hanging at your belt?" he asked.

"Why, it may open the front door of the palace in case it is locked," replied Janco, forgetting what his father had told him about answering questions.

"Dear, dear!" whispered the King to the Princess. "The bold man is so certain of destroying me and my kingdom that he has even provided himself with a key to the palace; that is the reason, I'm sure, but I shall ask him."

With that he turned to Janco and said:

"Why should you want a key to the

THE State Woman's Press Club announces the following change of programme: The social meeting this evening will be celebrated in an unusual and delightful manner. The date of the 18th is canceled and the occasion will be observed by the club in the accepting of the invitation from the dramatic department of the Shakespeare Study Club to attend the coming performance of "Twelfth Night," to be given at new Arcadium Hall, Thirtieth and Washington streets, Monday night, February 21. This invitation comes through the courtesy of Mrs. Julia LaBarre, the chairman of the Shakespeare evening in the Press Club and also of the dramatic department of the Shakespeare Club.

Mrs. Downey Bartlett's Indian play will be given in the near future and people are anxious to see what is said to be the best effort for Wednesday and Thursday evenings, February 23 and 24, in the Glencoe Senoel auditorium at 8 o'clock. Miss Brong is coaching. The Clifford orchestra will be in attendance at one of the performances.

Rehearsals for the "Deestrik Skule" have been resumed and the final performances are announced for Wednesday and Thursday evenings, February 23 and 24, in the Glencoe Senoel auditorium at 8 o'clock. Miss Brong is coaching. The Clifford orchestra will be in attendance at one of the performances.

This afternoon the presidents of the missionary societies of St. John's churches will meet with Mrs. B. A. Olsen, 602 West Richmond street, to arrange a programme for an all-day meeting to be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church either February 24 or 25. The exact date will be announced later.

"The Genius of Spain," from the point of art, will be discussed today at 2 o'clock by Dr. George Rebec, who will address the art department, Portland Woman's Club.

Members of St. Mark's Auxiliary are anticipating the meeting today at 2:30 o'clock in the Parish House. Miss Claire Oakes will give a paper on "The Life of Bishop Bent." A large attendance is anticipated. The address given by Dr. H. L. Burleson, president of the auxiliary on Wednesday inspired the auxiliaries with renewed interest in missions.

The Monday History Club met last Monday with Mrs. H. C. Claire, 445 East Twenty-eighth street. North. Valentine decorations and favors made the room exceptionally attractive. Mrs. G. E. Hardy was the guest of the day. Each member of the club represented some book, and many unique and

AVOID ST. VITUS' DANCE

Physicians are baffled by St. Vitus' dance because it is a nervous disease in which they can find nothing actually wrong with the nervous system.

Long before the child becomes awkward and begins dropping things there is a period in which the appetite is fickle and the patient is tired and listless. The jerking movements characteristic of the disease come much later.

In the early stages a good tonic for the blood and nerves will go far toward preventing the development of the disease. But the tonic must be free from alcohol and opiates for these make the nervous condition worse. When your child appears listless, prefers to sit and read rather than go out and play and requires entirely too much time to get his or her lessons, give a course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They cannot do harm, the system is sure to be benefited and you may avoid serious trouble. These pills build up the blood, nourish the starved nerves and improve the general health.

Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Write for free booklet on "Nervous Disorders."

butchers in Kenton. These men killed the animal within a few hours after receiving it and the carcass was identified in their shop later. They are accused of receiving stolen property, and at a hearing, before Judge Bell yesterday were also bound over to the grand jury.

TUBERCULAR COWS BOUGHT

Butchers Testify to Sale of Meat After Government Inspection.

Meat from consumptive cows, Government inspected, is being sold in the city of Portland, if the statements of Hans Hanson and G. W. Donaldson, proprietors of a slaughter-house in West Kenton, made on the witness stand in the court of District Judge Bell yesterday, are correct.

The men were fined $25 each for cruelty to animals. The butchers testified that they have frequently purchased tubercular cattle. They said that the carcasses of these cattle are Government inspected and approved portions of the flesh are sold to customers.
