Runner May Go Back.

NEWBERG, Or., Feb. 20.—(To the Sporting Editor.)—I would like to have you answer this question: A runner is on second base and one on third and the pitcher has the ball. The runner on second does not see the one on third and starts to steal. The pitcher throws the ball to third and the man on third like ball. After the runner coming from third baseman throws the ball to the catcher, who stands on the plate with the ball. After the runner coming from third sees that the catcher has the ball, he starts back to third and the runner from second, after touching third gots back to second safely. May they do this?
