MISS JACK COMING BACK

NURSE WRITES FROM SEATTLE THAT SHE WILL RETURN. Assertion Made That Those Who Caused Arrest Were Afraid of Testimony She Might Give.

Miss Frances Jack, arrested in this city February 15 on the charge of alleged kidnaping and who has just been released from jail at Seattle, in a letter to Portland friends says she will return to Portland soon just to procure her personal effects.

Her attorney was unable to facilitate the progress of the case, she declares, but eventually obtained a dismissal of the charge made by the complainant by forcefully declaring that action would be taken to vindicate his client without further delay.

"They evidently were afraid I knew more than they wanted aired in court," is Miss Jack's contention in commenting on her release.

When taken into custody in this city Miss Jack, who is a graduate nurse, was engaged at the home of Mrs. Branch, ex-City Auditor, caring for Mrs. Branch.

No solution of the disappearance of the little boy, or anything that has a bearing upon the marital troubles of Dr. Storch, to which his son's absence was said to be due, is contained in the note.

Child Says, "Take Old Car, but Let My Mama Go." Woman Arrested for Parking Motor in Front of Yeon Building Entrance Finds Champion in Daughter.

SHE did not understand the traffic ordinance in its various spurs, dips and angles, or she had forgotten—or something. At any rate, the young motorist drove her auto before the main entrance of the Yeon building—and stopped it there.

This is a grievous offense, and one for which many motorists of far more experience have talked the municipal judge and made explanations.

Traffic Officer Wells politely notified her that she must appear at the station, where the charge would be booked against her.

To the station she came, accompanied by her 6-year-old daughter. Police Officer Niles was just as nice about it. Her husband could appear in her stead before Municipal Judge Langstuth, she was told, as a pamphlet copy of the ordinance was handed to her.

The little girl shook her curls and snatched her serious eyes at the officer. She mumbled something, but with positive meaning.

"What was that you said?" asked he, leaning over the desk.

"I said you could take the old auto, but you mustn't lock my mamma in jail!"

JUDGE WANTS LEWAY

MAYOR ASKED TO GIVE MUNICIPAL COURT POWER TO KEEP FAITH. Promise Made Jitney Driver That He Will Be Given Chance Is Met by Revocation of License.

A plea that he be unhindered in his purpose to keep faith with offenders, as he expects them to observe their promises to the court, was presented to Mayor H. R. Albee and the City Council yesterday by Judge Arthur Langstuth, of the Municipal Court.

The case in point is that of W. T. James, Jitney driver, whose frequent and flagrant violations of the ordinance, and neglect to pay fines imposed, recently resulted in the imposing of a 10 days' sentence to Kelly Butte.

In passing sentence Judge Langstuth gave James the promise of the court that, upon release, he would be permitted one more chance to pay his machine for passengers. Further disregard of the ordinance, Judge Langstuth assured him, would result in the revoking of his license.

James was released from Kelly Butte on Wednesday. The following day his case was brought to the attention of Mayor Albee by Jitney Inspector Gill. Nine convictions were to his discredit, and his license was revoked.

The Municipal Judge points out that James' sister is indebted for the purchase of the car, which James drives on shares, and that she is now faced by a jeopardy of her interests.
