

CHAMBER ENDS YEAR

Finances Will Be Discussed at Meeting Tonight.

FESTIVAL BURDEN HEAVY

Future of Rose Show, Which Has Cost Organization $50,000 in Two Years, Will Be Considered at Meeting.

The completion of one year of endeavor for the upbuilding of Portland will be marked tonight when the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held in the Oregon building, the home of this organization, at 8 o'clock.

Reports of the past year's work will be heard and plans for the coming twelvemonth will be discussed.

The entire membership of the Chamber of Commerce may be on hand.

The project for bonding the Portland district by extending a steamship line to Alaska will be discussed.

Festival Finances to Be Considered. The means of financing the Rose Festival will come up for general discussion.

It is known that the plan of the city financing the Festival out of current revenues in attendance will be advocated.

The Chamber of Commerce, it is expected, will not want to assume the Rose Festival burden another year.

To date the rose fets last June and the one to come have cost the Chamber $50,000. Further expenditures of this sort are said to be out of harmony with the Chamber's finances.

George E. Hardy, executive secretary of the chamber, will have announcements of interest made in addition to making his report, which will deal with past performances and will review the work of the past year.

Mr. Hardy will outline a constructive programme he has in mind for the future. He will present this plan in some detail and will ask the aid of the members in the work.

A financial statement will be given, showing exactly where all the money expended during the past year has gone and for what purpose.

Election Is Week From Tonight. No officers are to be elected at tonight's meeting. These are to be chosen one week from tonight, when, as provided by the constitution of the Chamber, the directors shall meet and choose their officers.

A. J. Burns, president, and secretary will be elected at that time.

As to who will be elected president of the Chamber during the coming year, speculation is rife, but no particular candidate is mentioned.

A number of the most prominent business men in the work of the Chamber are suggested, all good timber for the position. It was hoped, until Wednesday night, that C. C. Galt, president of the organization during its first year, would continue in that office for another term. He has declined to do this.

Today's Film Feature. Columbia—"The Arvan," His Last Laugh. Majestic—"Burlesque on Carmen." Peoples—"The Eternal Grind." Pickford—"The Trail of the Lone Wolf." Sunset—"Salicades' Trip Up Columbia River Highway." Circle—"Saved by Wireless."

If you were asked to name the square foot of ground in New York City over which more celebrated theatrical stars had passed than any other spot in the whole community, what would you say? Would your thoughts turn back to the old Daly Theater, or the Empire, or to some other old haunt made sacred in the theatrical world by tradition—or would they lead you to the humble entrance to a motion-picture studio?

For it is a matter of record that there have passed over the threshold of the Famous Players studio more well-known stars than have adorned the stage of any theater. Among this distinguished number there appear the names of James K. Hackett, Mrs. Fiske, Little Langtry, Henry E. Dixie, James Pickford—"The Trail of the Lone Wolf," Cyril Scott, Arnold Daly, Charlotte Ives, William Farnum, Malcolm Wilkams, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn, Marie Doro, Gaby Deslys, H. B. Warner, Henrietta Crosman, Bertha Kalich, Maelya Arbuckle, David Higgin, Gladys Hanson, Tyrone Power, May Irwin, John Emerson, Edward Aheles, Florence Reed, William H. Crane, Alice Dovey, William Elliott, John Mason, Sam Berner and Charles Cherry, all of whom have been starred at different times by this one concern.

Oddly enough, the very first star to be presented on the screen by these producers, and perhaps the most distinguished of them all—Sarah Bernhardt—has never been the studio, as her first production was staged in her beloved France.

To this list there must be added one more name, for although he has not presented on the screen by these producers, and perhaps the most distinguished of them all—Sarah Bernhardt—has never been the studio, as her first production was staged in her beloved France.

Mary Meets Gaby. "Pleased to meet you!" "Moi aussi." "Et—enjoy votre—er—art, er—tres bien." "Vous—er—are so—er—tres charming." "I had admire your 'Madame Butterfly' so much."

"Merci, Je vous—er—al—er—vise—no, vu, aussi. Vous etes—er—exquisite."

No, gentle reader, this is not a record of a class in French in a school language. It is literal transcription of the light and airy conversation which took place between Mary Pickford and Gaby Deslys the other day, when the young French artist called upon the film star in the Famous Players studio. Gaby herself played in a famous play production, "The Triumph," about a year, but the film was made in Paris, and the couple had never met. Gaby watched Jack O'Brien directing "Hilda of Holland" for a few moments and then declared he had almost as much "tamperation" as a Frenchman.

Ancient Dress in "Lonesome Pine." Charlotte Walker, the attractive star of the spoken and silent drama, who is appearing in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" at the Pickford Theater, wears a dress in the popular feature which has a peculiar history. It is a cheap, red, cotton affair, torn and dirty. Miss Walker wore it during the three years she starred in the production and later loaned it to Miss Marjorie Rambeau, who followed her in the part. Miss Rambeau, when she had finished with the dress, was about to throw it away when she happened to think Miss Walker might want to keep it as a souvenir of her greatest stage triumph. Miss Walker placed the costume in the bottom of one of her many trunks in her New York home and promptly forgot what she had done with it. She had reached Hollywood before it was definitely decided that she was to appear in her famous play. She immediately wired East for the dress, but it was two weeks before her trunks could be ransacked and the costume was found.

Bessie Has a Past. Seventeen, and she already has a past. Shocking! No, not shocking, but delightfully romantic. Bessie Love is one of Tangle's chief leading women. Her part is the tale of how from an "extra" she developed in a few weeks into a leading woman with John Emerson in "The Flying Torpedo." Griffith himself assigned her next to the leading role in Mary Roberts Rhine-hart's "Acquitted," and along about this time W. S. Hart, looking for a bright young woman for the lead in his new Western vehicle, "The Arvan," snapped her up again. Within two months Douglas Fairbanks showed up with a scenario he had written himself, and he, too, wanted Miss Love for the leading feminine role. That is the play she is working on now. It is called "The Good-Bad Man." Four men captive, and all in about four months. Considerable past. And there isn't an ounce of the vampire in her makeup.

Big Chaplin Demand. So insistent have been exhibitors in their demand upon the Mutual Film Company that no fewer than 75 prints of "The Floorwalker," the first Chaplin release, scheduled for May 15, will be used in the city of New York alone to cover present booking schedules. The demand has been comparatively as great locally, according to Manager Reed, of the Portland Mutual exchange, among the supporting players in the initial Chaplin film, as well as in others to follow, are Edna Purviance, the Carmen in the Essanay film of that name; Charlotte Mueson, a French miss who was with Essanay for five years and more and lately in Selig's farces; Louta Bryan, an attractive blonde who attained fame in musical comedy in Chicago stock; Leo White, the comedian, who has supported Chaplin ever since he started in the pictures; Eric Campbell, who left "Pom Pom," a musical hit of the season, to join the company, and Lloyd Bacon, for several years in stock.

Retired Brigadier Made General Officer. Colonel James Jackson becomes general officer. Inspector of Oregon Militia Is Veteran of Civil War, and Has Been on Duty for State Since 1892.

News was yesterday received by Colonel James Jackson, United States Army, attached to the Governor's staff as inspector-general of the state troops, that he has been made a Brigadier-General on the retired list. The news was communicated to Colonel Jackson by Senator Chamberlain.

Colonel Jackson has been a resident of Portland since 1892, when he was detailed to service with the Oregon National Guard.

When the Civil War broke out Colonel Jackson joined the Army of the Potomac, and in 1861 was made a Sergeant in the Twelfth Infantry. Two years later he was made a Second Lieutenant, and at the end of the war he was retired as a Lieutenant-Colonel. He served with the Army of the Potomac in many engagements through the war.

By an act of Congress in 1897 Lieutenant-Colonel Jackson was given the rank of Colonel. In the Spring of 1898 he was named as Inspector-General of the state by Governor Lord, and he was actively engaged in getting the troops of the state ready for the Spanish-American war. He has held the position of Inspector-General of the state since his appointment in 1898.

Colonel Jackson is past 52, but attends to his work daily at the headquarters of the Oregon National Guard in the Morgan building.
