If the runner on third holds his base until the fly ball is caught, and then reaches the plate before the runner who has falled to hold his base is doubled up, the run counts. A good many people believe that the third out, made at either second or first as case may be, is a force out. If it was, then the run could not be counted, but such a play is not a force play. A force play can be made only when a base runner legally loses the right to the base he occupied by reason of the batsman becoming a base runner and he is therefore obliged to runner and he is therefore obliged to advance. In the case cited, if the runner happened to be on first when the fly ball was hit, that base belonged to him. If he happened to be on second that base belonged to him. Since the batter was retired, he retained the right to the base originally held, de-batter was retired, he retained the right to the base originally held, despite the fact that he left before the catch was made.

Another play that annually comes in for a lot of discussion is to have a runner on first, and the batter hit a ball to the infield. Usually on such plays, it is always regarded as best to keep the ball shead of the runner if possible when making the play. That is, throw to second to force out the runner from first, and then to first in an effort to get the batter. Sometimes this play is made the other way, ball players call it trying to make a double play backwards. The batter is thrown out at first and the ball is then shot to second in an effort to get the runner. The question that arises is the holding of the ball ahead of the runner at second sufficient to complete the double play. It is not. If the runner on first continues to second he must be touched out. He dove under the man, who was almost dead from steam, water and fright, and carried him on his back up the 25 feet of ladder to safety.

Patrick Murphy, a pipeman attached to engine company No. 55, rescued two women, a boy and a man from a burning building at $17 Wrightwood avenue on March 19 of last year, but he became so embarrassed when he tried to tell the commission about it that he forgot to mention his rescue of one of the women until a comrade in the rear of the room reminded him in an audible whisper; of ladder to safety.

"Tell 'em about the offer woman you pulled out of the second story."
Then Murphy did. The pipeman really rescued five lives at the fire, because it turned out that one of the women he saved became a mother two days later. Assistant Marshal Egan had a seconstory of heroism to repeat to the com-mission in addition to his bravery in the Eastland disaster. He was among the Eastland disaster. He was among the first at a bad fire in a boarding-house at 55 East Grand avenue December 13. When the firemen got there they found four people had jumped out of the top floor, where it later was found that a man and his wife had burned to death. A restaurant proprietor, Gus Marenskis, was hanging from a fourth-story window. Egan "heeled" a 36-foot ladder, rushed up the rungs and grabbed Marenskis just in time to save him from choosing between having his face burned by the flames shooting from the window or letting go his hold and dropping. Bulletin Issued by Agricultural Department Gives Directions. QREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, April 20. — Representative

WASHINGTON, April $17, - Coat-Kitchin, of North Carolina, chairman Kitchin, of North Caronna, charling of the ways and means committee, in a recent speech in the House, undertook to make reply to several tariff speeches previously made by Representative Humpi'rey, of Washington, and went ing the seed of legumes with inoculated soil before planting is a simple method of insuring soil inoculation at slight cost. County agents in Hinois have found ordinary furniture glue effective in holding particles of inoculated soil to the seeds. This method gives each individual seed some of the particles of inoculated soil which it carries with it when it is planted. The scheme requires but a small amount of inoculated soil and coats but a few coats and account of the scheme requires but a small amount of inoculated soil and coats but a few coats and accounts. coats but a few cents an acre. The method is described in Farmers' Bulle-tin 704 of the United States Department of Agriculture as follows: Dissolve two! handfuls of furniture glue for every gallon of boiling water and allow the solution to cool. Put the seed in a washtub and then sprinkle enough of the solution on the seed to moisten but not to wet it (one quart per bushel is sufficient) and stir the mixture theroughly until all the seed
