LONDON, April 26.—Naval experts expressed the opinion today that the German attack on Lowestoft and Yarmouth yesterday, in which 25 were killed and awounded, was intended as a cover for filibustering operations that are being carried on in Ireland. Suggestion that it might also have been intended as a reprisal for the British attack on Zeebrugge, or to test out the strength and disposition of the British aquadron, were made by the Times' naval expert.

All of the British ships, which engaged in a running fight with the raiders, have returned safely, two of the light cruisers bearing shell wounds, but not in vital places. One of the British destroyers which played a part in a battle in the North Sea sustained a shot in the engine room, four of the crew being scalded.

The German official statement on the raid is as follows:

"On one cruiser a big fire was observed. One destroyer and two enemy scout boats were sunk, one of the latter being the English fishing steamer King Stephen, which formerly refused to save the crew of the German airship L-19 when in distress. The crew of the fishing steamer was taken prisoner. The remaining enemy naval forces withdrew. On our side there were no losses, and all the ships returned undamaged.

"Simultaneously with the attack of our naval forces a naval air squadron stracked on the night of April 24-25, on the Eastern counties of England. Bombs were thrown with good effect on industrial buildings at Cambridge and Norwich railway buildings, near Lincoln, batteries near Winterton, Ipswich, Norwich and Harwich, as well as enemy reconnoitering ships on the English custs.
