FISHING CONTENTION IS WON BY INDIANS

Federal Court Decision Takes Lone Pine Point Grounds From Seufert Brothers.

OLD TREATY IS UPHELD

All Tribes in Mid-Columbia Re gion Are Held to Possess Undisturbed Rights to For-disturbed Rights to Former May and the Mid-Columbia region are secure in their rights to take aslation along that stream just as their racestore did before the first white men came to the Oregon country. They cannot be dispossessed from accustomed fishing grounds and their best locations for snaring salmon cannot be taken by the white men.

This is the result of a decision in Federal Court yesterday by Judge Charles E. Wolverton in white the end was written to the holly-contexted avit of the United States against Stifers. Brothers, cannerymen, of the Childed States against Stifers and their beand of the United States and accustomed fishing places of the Yakima reservation is reserved to such tribes and bands by the treaty of June, 1855, between the United States and accustomed fishing places of the Yakima reservation is reserved to such tribes and bands by the treaty of June, 1855, between the United States and accustomed fishing places of the Yakima reservation is reserved to such tribes and bands by the treaty of June, 1855, between the United States and accustomed fishing places of the Yakima reservation is reserved to such tribes and bands by the treaty of June, 1855, between the United States and accustomed fishing places of the Yakima reservation is reserved to such tribes and such tribes. Old Treaty Upheld.

The decision upholds "this time-honored" treaty, made by the pioneers with the Indians, but it goes further than that. It maintains the rights of the Indians to fish in the Columbia River with wheels or whatever modern fishing gear is desired, in lieu of the old-time nets and spears employed by them at the time the treaty was made. It was contended in the hearing of the case that Indians were, at most, encase the content of the content o

It was contended in the hearing of the case that Indians were, at most, entitled to use only dipnets, since that was the method of fishing in vogue at the time of the signing of the treaty. The guit was brought by the Government on behalf of the Indians, who complained they were disturbed in their fishing rights by the defendants, after possession of the fishing points in question for more than half a century. The case of Sam Williams, a Yakima Indian, was made the chief contention of the suit. He had established a fishwheel at Lone Pine Point, attaching it to state land. It was set adrift, the wheel at Lone Pine Point, attaching it to state land. It was set adrift, the Government alleged, through the agency of the defendants, who found it against their interests to have Indians in possession of such a desirable fishing spot, and a wheel of the Seufert Brothers' Company replaced it.

Seufert Bros., in defense, laid claim to this property, but title to it is found to be in the name of the state.

All Indians Included.

The decision established that the Yakima, as well as other indians along the Columbia River, have a right to the use of the accustomed fishing grounds on the south bank of the stream, as well as the north, this being a point that was contended by the Government for the first time in the case lust closed.

The case harks back to the time when Isaac Stevens was Governor of the Oregon Territory. He it was who concluded the treaty with the Indians, being also superintendent of Indian affairs in the Pacific Northwest.

For the sake of convenience in making the treaty, Indians of tribes other than the Yakima were classified as such, and all were given equal rights in the fisheries that had for years supplied their Winter food in large part. The case just ended attracted much The case just ended attracted much attention, as many old white settlers and Indians appeared as witnesses to give their version of the situation on the river n the early days as regards the accustomed fshing places of the Indians.

The case just ended attracted much the keynote struck by L. D. Coffman, dean of the college of education of the University of Minnesota, at the opening conference of the high school teachers of English and commercial courses at the university.

Adjustment Attempt Fails.

The criticism directed against the high schools lies rooted in a commercial factury with Scufert Bros. informally to adjust the difficulty without Illing attion. This attempt failed, and action was filed by the Government of the purpose of the meeting as a combehalf of its Indian wards in June, 1915, that had for its purpose the enjoining of Seufert Bros. from interfering with the treaty rights of the Indians in respect to flahins. A preliminary injunction, as well as a permanent injunction, was asked, and in May, 1918, a preliminary hearing was had before Judge Wolverton, who dented the petition for a temporary injunction.

MARQUETTE. Mich., April 23—Miss Emma Train, known throughout the upper peninsula as "the mystery woman of Au Train." is dead in her little cabin on the shore of Au Train Lake.

The woman hermit, whose age was estimated at 85 years, was one of the interesting characters of the region of Marquette and Alger counties and scores of stories were told of her strange actions and of her prowess as a hunter and trapper, occupations she strange actions and of her prowess as a hunter and trapper, occupations she pursued up until the time of her death. Her life before she took up her homestead and built the little log cabin on Lake Au Train, 32 years aso, is not known here. She had few confidants, and to these she told only meager facts regarding her life and was slient to the reason she took up her abode in that lonely, man-forsaken spot in Marquette County.

When she first arrived it was learned that she had been a trained aurse in sweden before coming to this country.
