DESCENDANT OF PATRICK HENRY LEADS THE FASHION IN COMPLETE SILHOUETTE COSTUME IN NEW YORK.

MISS EVAN BURROWS FONTAINE.

Miss Fontaine is a many-great-granddaughter of Patrick Henry, and therefore needs no further introduction. Miss Fontaine leads the fashion at Bretton Hall Hotel, in New York, appearing in an altogether new and novel costume, attractively stenciled.

Before Bretton Hall had recovered from the thrill caused by the sight of the first complete spring costume in silhouette design, its wearer appeared in a street suit of white broadcloth with hat and accessories decorated with silhouettes of black swallows.

As yet the stencil has caught everything wearable excepting shoes, and it is expected that even footwear will shortly display the figured outline. It is conceded that the fashion is as beautiful as it is striking, because the silhouettes are not only accomplished in black and white, but also in colors.

The children's interest in the home and its appearance which would be helpful in many ways. It would start their thoughts toward such matters within the house as home decoration—furniture, pictures, wallpaper, the arrangement of the furnishings, the colors in the home, and all such matters.

And it will be of use in another way. For when their interest is enlisted to make things beautiful, they will not want their work marred by anything that is not beautiful. It will not be so difficult to induce them to keep things "fixed up."

Every one takes an interest in his own handiwork, and once the children feel that they have of their own volition had something to do with making the home and the yard attractive, they will not want their work marred by anything that is not beautiful.

The idea evolved by the authorities and school teachers of this town reaches out to other ends than thought. It may help many a mother and father to enlist the co-operation of their children in ways helpful both to them and the young people.

latter visited her daughter, Mrs. H. H. Calvin, in San Francisco for a fortnight. Mr. Hoge's brother, Holmes Hoge, a prominent banker of Chicago, and his two daughters, Miss Hoge and Miss Katherine Hoge, also visited in California with the R. R. Hoge, and are now in Portland for a few days.

Miss Claire Baker will give a lecture-recital on the opera "Aida" at East Portland Library tomorrow evening at 8:15. She will be assisted by Miss Katherine Emsey, soprano soloist.

Honoring Mr. and Mrs. George Hotchkiss Street (Kathryn Cryster), Miss Alice Stanley and Clifford L. Stanley were hosts for dinner Sunday, their guests numbering 10.

Society is taking considerable interest in the plays to be produced by the June 16 class of St. Mary's Academy and College on May 29 at the Baker Theater. "The Princess" and "The Surf-ragette" are the plays to be given on Monday evening, and rehearsals predict a most successful evening.

Mrs. Harry E. Chipman will entertain with two bridge parties next week, June 1 and 2. Both affairs will be large, and are eagerly anticipated.

In honor of Miss Marie Honens, of Calgary, Canada, who is due to reach Portland Friday, Miss Ellen Newberg, a former schoolmate of Miss Honens' at Cherrys, will be hostess for a dance Monday night.

Miss Annie Josephine Matson, of 287 Fairbank avenue, this city, and Rudolph Hanson were married Tuesday evening in the presence of immediate relatives in their new home. Rev. J. Richard Olson officiated, using the ring ceremony. Miss Lillian Swanson was maid of honor, and Carl Stried acted as best man.

Miss Elvinda Bowman played the wedding march, the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The ceremony was followed by an elaborate wedding supper. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are at home at 160 Skidmore street.

Children and the Spring Renovation. SOME time ago, the municipal authorities of a certain town enlisted the interest of the school teachers, and together they worked to get the school children to help reduce the fire risk.

They offered prizes to the school children for the best compositions on the defective places—the places where fire might easily start—in the home. Quick, keen childish eyes got busy and the results were amazing. A town official was then sent to consult with the parents to see what could be done to remove the risks, and unfortunately the same idea—namely, to discover lurking danger from fire, though that would not be amiss—but to find places about the home or yard that could be made more beautiful this spring.

Children's eyes are keen and unjaded. They see many things that older folks pass over. They see in a new way. They are original in their planning and thinking. They are not hampered by traditions or by the thought of what others will say, if their interests are once aroused in the home and grounds to point out shabby and unsightly places, or to suggest improvements on what now is, the results might be quite as astonishing as they were in that town. It was amazing what these school children unearthed, and many a mother might be equally surprised if she started the boys and girls of the home on a tour of investigation.

And not only might they receive many valuable hints, but she would arouse unprecedented wave of popularity. Although she is unknown before the Panama-Pacific Exposition, she won her most stable and justified admiration there. Every picture which she sent to the exhibition was shown and every one was sold.

The success of the painter may be said to rest upon her unusual complete grasp of her subject and her masterly craftsmanship. She is the present-day interpreter of humor and sentiment, and such she is likely to remain. While her paintings do not lack an aesthetic note, they are built upon a particularly solid foundation as to subject matter and art.

Miss Smith is for the most part a colorist. She has the rare gift of obtaining variety of hue and at the same time preserving a dominant tone that will give the impression of unity of color.

Miss Smith has painted pictures of children that children may enjoy, but she has by no means excluded the appreciation of men and women in her choice of subjects, or her method of approach to the near approach to humor which just excludes mirth.

Galleries throughout the East have been hanging the pictures of Miss Smith. Among those which have been seen for the most part are twenty quaint Mother Goose rhymes and four Kipling subjects. She has also shown several Christmas subjects and the illustrations for a new edition of Louisa Alcott's "Mamma's Tales."
