PROGRAMME FOR TODAY AT ELEVENTH-STREET PLAYHOUSE. 1:30 P. M.—Doors open. 2 P. M.—Musical programme begins. 2:30 P. M.—Mrs. Vaughn's lecture. Subject, "Cost of Living"; menu, corn soup, fish cutlets, escalloped tomatoes, Astor salad, sour cream dressing, nut loaf, chocolate cake, caramel icing.

Twelve hundred intensely interested women and not a few men formed the first class yesterday of the Oregonian Better Food, Better Homes School, conducted by Mrs. Kate Vaughn at the Eleventh-Street Playhouse. Pencil and notebooks were used diligently by the women, and also by the men.

"California cake" was made and served to the assemblage. Some dainty dish will be served every day this week. The stage is arranged like a kitchen. Saturday Mrs. Vaughn will present some woman in the audience with the A-B gas range and the attractive white cabinet she will use all week.

System as means to harmony and efficiency was urged on housewives. Cooking she terms "cultural and an accomplishment." Too much drudgery, she says, is a bad thing. Diversions and entertainment, she says, are necessary.

THE SANDMAN STORY BY MRS. F. WALKER

BOBBY and Benny and Billy were three little squirrels, and they were brothers as well, but they quarreled a great deal, as some brothers do, you know, when they really are very fond of each other.

Mr. Squirrel worried a great deal over her three squirrel sons, and tried hard to keep peace among them, but she did not succeed very well. One day Benny and Bobby and Billy ran among the trees playing tag and picking up acorns, when Billy said: "Come along and let us go down to the river in the woods and fish."

"There are no fish there," said Benny. "What is the use of going?" "Come along, Bobby," said Billy, "let the baby stay behind if he likes," and off they ran.

"They are running away from me," screamed Benny, louder than ever. Benny caught up to the others just as they reached the river. Pretty soon Bobby Squirrel was fishing and playing from the right bank, while Billy and Benny had cut from a tree, and the water went into Bobby's eyes.

"Oh, my poor brothers!" cried Benny. "I will never quarrel with them again if they come back." The sun was just setting when Bobby and Billy Squirrel reached home, wet and hungry, and Mrs. Squirrel was just closing the door for the night when she saw them. "Oh, my poor children! Are you alive or have your ghosts come back?" she cried. "Oh, we are so hungry and wet!" cried Bobby. "We are not drowned at all, and, mother, you know there are no such things as ghosts. You told us so yourself." "Oh, dear! Oh, dear! I was so frightened I don't know what I am saying," said Mrs. Squirrel. "How did you get out of the water?" Bobby and Billy told her how Mrs. Duck helped them. "And do give us some supper, mother," said Bobby. "We are almost starved."
