Chairman Harding's Oration Classic Worth and Complete as Campaign Document-Moose Have More Enjoyment.

CHICAGO, June 7 .- (Editorial correspondence.)-When I sit down to write my impressions of the great National Resolutions Republican Convention which met today and remained in session for two brief hours. I have a good deal of difficulty in composing my mind to an orderly review of its incidents. epoch-making nor surring, but the report to the full committee at 10 come even sooner than has been pregreat traditions of former years. There were the same immense crowds, the surging aisles, playing bands, waving banners, gold-badged delegates, confused press gallery, busy secretaries, officious sergeants-at-arms, omnipresent police and all the colorful and interesting details of a historic scene. But there was no tension. Where, too, were the great men, such as orna-mented other conventions with their OFFICER PLEADS INSANITY presence, their oratory, and the actual display of leadership?

Other Days Contrasted.

No one who has seen or read of other days will fail to recall that the cheering partisans of distinguished Amerigreat states were conspicuous by their speech of Ingersol at Cincinnati or the Appomattox introduction of Roscoe Conklin for Grant; or the splendid unstable. imagery of Garfield in his nomination of Sherman. Or the cross of gold and crown of thorns climax of William Jenof Sherman. Or the cross of gold and nings Bryan. Not in a Republican connings Bryan. Not in a Repair was there vention, however. Four years ago when Bryan took his press seat, the active gallery of reporters cheered. But today the neglected Bryan took his place as a humble news man, his fame unnoticed and his advent unsung. So it is throughout. The forms are the same, but the heroes are gone, forgotten and the crowds take a matter of fact view of the whole business.

Thrills Are Lacking.

There was not a thrill from beginning to end, except in the wildly enthusiastic reception of Chairman Hardocument everything was there from preparedness to protection, from the British Court Grants Decree to Mrs. Democratic tariff failures to Panama tolls, from wobbly watching to miserable muddling in Mexico. There was liberal sprinkle of catch phrases and pungent periods and a rather high of literary finish throughout. Perhaps that was what was the matter. The speech somehow lacked the punch. What the crowd wanted and did not get was a roaring broadside against the Wilson Administration, something to loosen the tongues and excite the feelings of the listeners, so that they could stand up and howl themselves rights granted his wife last January.

There were occasions, indeed, that called for applause and it was given, but there were no roof-raising cheers no ear-deafening outbursts, no uproat ing response, the legitimate devices of a well-written and fairly well-delivered eration of classic worth. I hope it reads better than it sounded. I wonder why they did not turn the job of firing the opening gun over to Borah, who is of 42-centimeter caliber, or to Lodge, veloping columns dispersed and put to who also knows how to handle high explosives? However, Harding was safe and sane. The Progressives had a more enjoyable time of it. The men with the hairtrigger mouths and the women with emotional souls and strident voices were there and in evidence. The papers say that the ovation over the mention of Roosevelt's name lasted an hour and a half. It may well be believed. That is what they were there for. Roosevelt has the enthusiasm, natural and artificial, as he always has had it. The Progressives are most anxious to make it evident that they are still as virile today, and that they are a force to be reckoned with in the coming campaign. notably successful. What they lack in numbers they make up in noise, but it cannot be truthfully or vocal representations are very n
