fect the leveling. We want the world measurement raised to our heights. Until it is done we shall cling to American wages for American workmen, American markets for American products, and hold the Re-publican guaranty of our material good for-

for American products, and hold the Republican guaranty of our material good fortune.

Even Democrats See Error.

The nations abroad and the Democratic party at home are bearing witness to Republican wisdom. German industrial self-reliance is the sequence to her adoption of a Republican protective tariff, and England's manifest conversion to this fostering plan will magnify the prophetic wisdom of Republican protectionists. Even the Democratic party is penitent now and makes confession in action if not words. The proposed destruction of American sugar has been repealed, and simulated grief about the American breakfast table has been put aside. With that facility for changing position which has been made manifest from Baltimore to Vera Cruz, the party in power proposes to restors the tariff commission which it had hastened to deatroy.

This change of attitude is not because of its great and manifest love of commission alone, but because failure is written across every paragraph of Democratic revision and fear is haunting the White House siumbers. The Wilson Administration has sensed the country's anxiety about industrial conditions when the revelry in munitions and the immunity granted by war are ended. It has made a reflective estimate of the perils of 1914, once called psychological, and means to apply a stolen remedy, with more concern about the effects than the ethics involved. We do not oppose a tariff commission. We favor it. It is a Republican creation we do not want one, however, conceived in Democratic hostility to American industry or managed in Democratic opposition to business success. We would hasten the protective defense against foreign invasion, to suarantee our industrial security, and then let a tariff commission deliberately and scientifically work out the needs of American preference.

No honest business in this country is too entificially work out the needs of American preference.

No honest business in this country is too big to be good and useful, or too little to be protected and encouraged, and both big and little deserve the American shield against destruction by foreign competition, and protection from the raiders, political or otherwise, at home. Business and its agencies of transportation are so inseparable from each other and from the common weal that the political party which does not pledge them a square deal, no more and no less, does not deserve the confidence of the people. The strength of the business heart shows in every countenance in all the land, and the weakness of that heart holds a Nation ill. We must strengthen the heart of American business in government cooperation rather than official opposition.

OPENING REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Referring to the Administration's foreign policy in the European war, Senator Harding declared that it had spoken with more rhetoric than resolution. Mexican negotiations he declared as the greatest flase in the content of the part of the pa public again ministering to the re-establishment of peace and all its blessing."

Republicans, he said, believed in adequate National defense. The Democratic party, he insisted, interrupted when the Republicans were building to high rank among the naval powers.

"I shall not say that it is ours to have the greatest Navy in the world," said the Senator, "but noting the elimination of distance and passing of our one-time isolation, we ought to have a Navy that fears none in the world, and can say any time and anywhere—these are American rights and must be respected."

America, the Senator said, proclaimed justice and loved peace, "and we are not too proud to fight for them."

"No one," the Senator said, "disputes a temporary prosperity in our land today. But it is sectional in its factory aspect, abnormal in its feverish rush, fictitious in its essentials and perverting in its tendency. Worse, it is the gold stuiced from the river of blood, poured out by the horrifying sacrifice of millions of our fellowmen. God forbid that we should boast a prosperity wrought in such waste of human life. We would rather rejoice in the prosperity of peace."

Discussing the Democratic party briefly, the Senator said it had "proclaimed the sacredness of its pledges and then profaned them": that it had "espoused the freedom of the seas and wrought only the freedom of the Panama Canal," and had professed economy and is staggered by its own extravagance." He attacked the shipping bill because of its Government ownership feature and the attempt of Democratic forces to extend independence to the Philippines, "to set adrift an island empire, in violation of our obligations to the world, to the Philippine people and ourselves."

Senator Harding concluded with a laudation of Americanism, which, he said, "begins at home and radiates abroad."

Rita Macrum Buxton. Mrs. Harrison G. Platt, well known in Portland, was unanimously elected president of the trustees for the ensuing year and President C. J. Bushnell was unanimously re-elected president of the university. At the college dinner concluding the exercises notable addresses in behalf of higher Christian education and college loyalty were given by the retiring president of the board of trustees, B. S. Huntington: the retiring president of Hillsboro; Dean Mary Farnham! J. P. Hurley, president of Forest Grove Commercial Club, and Otis Holmes, Trustees, alumni and students agreed that with its $500,000 in assets, its increasing student body and circle of friends the prospects of the college are now more bright than at any prayous.

There were stalwart Americans then. Americans from Great Britain with British ideals and their devotion to orderly government. There were Americans from the land of Napoleon and Lafayette, to give of the enthusiasm and heroism of France in establishing new freedom. There were Americans from Germany to fight the battles of the Republic and blend their sturdiness and thoroughness in the progress of a new people, not a new race. There were Americans from the green fields of Ireland, with a passion for liberty, Americans from Southern Europe to battle for opportunity. There were Americans from the green fields of Ireland, with a passion for liberty, Americans from Southern Europe to battle for opportunity. There were Americans who came from oppression and stood erect in the freedom of the Republic. They all made common cause. There was lack of homogeneity of race, but there was kinship of soul, and that soul was American. The gates to our ports have swaing inward ever since, there has been a welcome to the foreign-born, whom we asked to drink freely of the waters of our political life and find their places in the sun of American opportunity. They are an inseparable and important and valued part of American opportunity. They are an inseparable and important and valued part of American citizenship, and the few zealois of any origin who violate our neutrality do not and cannot impugn the loyalty or the American patriotism of that great body which adds to the swelling chorus of Partiality Is Excused.

"My country 'tis of thee, Sweet land of liberty."

"My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty."

It is not surprising that in their hearts there is sympathy or partiality for the land of their nativity when it is involved in a life and death struggle like that which saturates Europe with the blood of their kinsmen. Search your hearts deeply, my countrymen. One must he human to be an American, he must have human sympathies and human love, and I should pity the foreign-born and the sons of foreign-born whose very souls are not wrung by the catacity-mal sorrow of the Old World. But sorrow is the test of thes oul and the very altar of reconsceration. This is the momentous hour for the blazing soul of American allegiance. The spirit of the fathers is calling, and the safety of unborn Americans is demanding and the security of the republic is requiring, that now and here and everywhere, under the Stars and Stripes, we proclaim a plain, simple, glad and unalterable Americansm. It must he the offering of loyalty and devoilon and love and trust, and life, if need be, to these United States, now and everlastingly.

The Americanism which indexes these United States must be more than the consecration of the individual. In the great fulfillment we must have a citizenship less concerned about what the Government can do for it and more anxious about what it can for the Nation. There must be the submersion of local and sectional views and the standards of nationality reared in their stead. Holding to the ideals of just American rights, the Government must protect those rights, at home, on our borders, on the seas, in every land and under every sky.

Seeking to practice the very Americanism I preach as Republican goapel, I am reluctant to speak of a division of American sentiment relating to our foreign affairs. One must be an American first and a partisan atterwards, though we believe Republican sand their fullest protection.

Markets Must Be Secure.

To meet the obligations we must first make sure of maintained mental, moral and physical health at home. It is good to recall that ours is the only major political party ever formed in this country on a great moral lisue. Our first proclamation was human liberty, to be glorified by the spiritual and material development of a free people. We opened the way to higher human attainments and emphasized human rights under the guaranties of civil liberty. We need an in the granties of civil liberty. We need to marrial people is the halo of liberty itself. Let us be honest not only in proclamation, but in practice; not alone in campaigns, but in our daily affairs and in every human relationship. If popular government is to be held dependable and command the confidence as well as the loyalty of its citizenship, political parties and the relationship is political parties and the platforms and their spokesmen must be honest and sincere.

See This Clothing Industry

A newspaper man startled us the other day by saying, "I didn't know you made any clothes yourselves."

"Horrors," we replied, "haven't you seen our Mill-to-Man clothing advertisements? Have we advertised in vain?"

"Yes," he replied, "but so many of these clothing people in the past have claimed that they made their own clothes, when, in fact, they send all of their orders East, and I thought it was only a custom among tailors and clothiers to talk about patronizing home industry in order to land trade."

We immediately gave this gentleman a free elevator ride to our fourthfloor, daylight, electric tailor shop, where a hundred contented tailors are busy making clothes for good dressers in Oregon and several other Western states. We certainly did open his eyes to the size of this local clothing industry. He wondered how much business we are doing in Portland, and we again surprised him with the information that eighty per cent of our business comes from outside of this city.

"How is it," he replied, "that you do so much outside? Isn't Portland large enough to consume your entire output?"

Here is where we made our big point—by reminding him that he himself -and a newspaper man, at that-hadn't paid any attention to this local industry of ours. He thought all along that we were only "kidding" in our advertisements about our big fourth-floor shops.

Have YOU ever been misled on the clothes topic? If you have or not, your chance to become well dressed at a reasonable price is HERE and NOW, at the BROWNSVILLE WOOLEN MILLS. It makes no difference to us how you want the garments-ready-to-wear or tailored to measure—our specialty is Mill-to-Man clothes, with no cotton added in transit, and no middleman's profits stuck on. We can save you $5 or $10 on your suit any day in the week.
