BY ADDISON BENNETT. MADRAS, Or., June 25 .- (Special.)-Perhaps the reader may wish to take a trip to what is called the Central Oregon country, which is rather an indefi-nite term. It certainly embraces all of Crook and Jefferson Counties. To get here safely and comfortably just now, while "the trout are ripe," just take the 7:10 train any evening at the North Bank Depot in Portland. Your ticket will take you as far as Fall Bridge by will take you as far as Fall Bridge by the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway. Then you will take the Oregon Trunk line, cross the Columbia and follow for many miles up the Deschutes River. The most of the distance along the Deschutes is in a deep canyon, where it was difficult and expensive to construct a road, but the Oregon Trunk is an exceptionally well-built road.

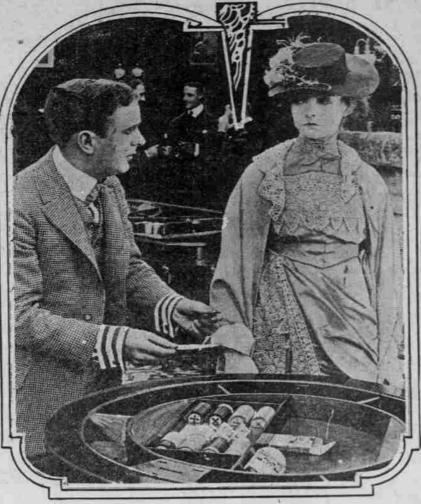

At a point about 200 miles from Portland the road swings to the east from the canyon and follows up a small creek until it emerges into the open country at Madras, which is 217 miles from Portland. Supposing you come on pleasure bent, hoping to fill your creel with speckled beauties, you will find ample opportunities in almost any direction from Madras, where you can get full directions and hire conveyances on moderate terms. moderate terms.

On moderate terms.

But perhaps you are on business; you will still find Madras the gateway to Central Oregon. In fact to get into Central Oregon from the west or from the Columbia River section, you will have to take a flying machine or take a roundabout trip of several hundred miles to miss Madras. When you reach this nice little city you will more than likely hear much talk about the condition of the crops, particularly wheat and rye, for you will be close to a district that sends out a good many carloads of these cereals each year.

cans, Minority Is Almost Sure to Be Heard.

CHICAGO, June 25. - (Special.)-Rampant Bull Moosers will take the war path at tomorrow's meeting of the Progressive National Committee. Unless all signs fail the leaders who favor action in accordance with the ad-vice of Theodore Roosevelt will find of it. A day of fervid oratory is in prospect. Unanimous action of any sort seems a remote possibility.

Minority Report Seems Sure. If a majority of the committee de-cides to follow Roosevelt into the Recides to follow Roosevelt into the Republican party, a minority report is certain to line up for President Wilson or else turn in desperation to the Prohibition or Socialist nomines. Action by a majority on the other hand in favor of a Progressive third ticket will not deter a minority from supporting

No matter what the Progressives do, the Republicans are not worried over the situation. With Roosevelt declaring himself flatly for Hughes, as it is well known he will do in a statement

Progressives Lack Candidate.

The Progressives who advocate the substitution of a new Presidential candidate on their ticket in place of Roosevelt, it is asserted, will be unable to find any man of National prominence who would make the race. From the Republican viewpoint, tomorrow's meeting will mark the demise of the Progressive party, no matter what action may be taken.

George W. Perkins, chairman of the Progressive National executive committee; John W. McGrath, secretary to Colonel Roosevelt, and about a dozen Eastern Progressives, arrived this afternoon. Others from the West and South also put in an appearance. Numerous conferences were held tonight. Progressives Lack Candidate.
