

MRS. HETTY GREEN IS CRITICALLY ILL

World's Richest Woman, Paralyzed, Orders That No Nurses Be Engaged.

TWO IN DUTY IN DISGUISE

Reporters Get New Impression That Miserly Figure of the Money World is Charitable, but Permits No Publicity.

NEW YORK, June 25.—(Special.)—Hetty Green—of the Great Gold Reserve—has been ill for more than a month. Tonight reports were in circulation that she was dying—and dying as Hetty Green might be expected to die, happy in the thought that she was passing away economically.

As the report had it, the woman who cannot forget with all her millions, that a hundred pennies make a dollar, had suffered a stroke and paralysis, but despite her critical condition had militantly suppressed a project to bring two trained nurses into the house, for a period of $50 a week, besides their board and butter is high.

With an inexperienced and inexpensive immigrant girl at her bedside, the patient had lost consciousness. The stroke had come as she sat at her desk, according to the story, and the physicians had thought it advisable not to move her from the office of her home at No. 7 West Ninetieth street.

Stroke Is Admitted. Inquirers last night were met at the door by Mrs. Green's secretary, who admitted that Mrs. Green's condition was serious and that "it might have been a stroke."

Colonel Edward R. Green, Mrs. Green's son, when seen last night at his home, which adjoins his mother's said: "It isn't true that my mother is dying. She had a paralytic stroke recently, and since then has had to be moved about in a wheelchair. She does not sleep in her home, but is brought through the passage into my house every night. A few days ago she was out in the motor and caught a very serious chill. At her age we are much worried. We are taking good care of her."

"Is she still able to manage her own affairs?" "Well, you'd think so," laughed the Colonel. "If you ever heard her put me over the jumps for the way I sometimes handle business matters, she could and she would. She is a mistake in the way she brought me up, or else I'd make a better job of it."

Mrs. Green Is 83. "Of course, my mother is aging—she's 83, you know—and I shouldn't be surprised if some have noticed a change in her appearance."

Colonel Green admitted there were two trained nurses in the house "in disguise."

"They don't wear their uniforms, and mother thinks they're seamstresses," he explained, "transported by the nurses she might worry herself into a really dangerous condition. That's all there is to that."

The reports left with a new impression of Hetty Green, for they had talked to the policeman on the beat, along with others.

"She gives money a plenty to churches and charities," he said. "She calls us cops into the house to talk with her every once in a while, and one time she told me, 'I'm a mistake in charity when you give and then tell. There's only one that knows how much I give, and that's the right one—the man above.'"

Sunday's Mother Is Dead. WARSAW, Ind., June 25.—(Special.)—Mary Jane Stowell, 76, mother of the evangelist, Billy Sunday, was found dead in bed at the Sunday home at Winona Lake at 8 o'clock today. Her death was due to heart trouble. She was in good health Saturday and when she retired at night she made no complaint. When she remained in bed longer than usual this morning, Mr. Sunday went to her room. He thought she was asleep, and did not realize that she was dead until he touched her face.

CHAMBERLAIN AND LAKE DISCORD

Open Clash Expected on Bill to Ratify Interstate Fisheries Pact.

JUNIOR SENATOR OPPOSES

Mr. Lane to Do Everything Possible to Block Action, Despite Almost Unanimous Sentiment in Favor.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 25.—An open clash between Senator Chamberlain and his colleague, Senator Lane, may be expected just as soon as the Senate finds time to consider bills on the calendar. The clash will come over the House bill proposing to ratify the agreement between the states of Oregon and Washington, under which they propose to exercise joint jurisdiction over fisheries in the Columbia River.

Senator Chamberlain is standing firmly back of this legislation, although he did not propose it, while Senator Lane has planted himself in the path of the bill, and announces that he will do everything possible to prevent its passage. Senator Lane, however, reported by the Judiciary committee, to which it was referred.

Both States in Accord. Ratification by Congress of agreement between Oregon and Washington, by the Columbia River fisheries bill, is not new. No less than 22 such agreements have already been ratified, and under the existing agreements between the two states must be ratified by Congress before they become operative.

As matters stand, the Legislatures of both Oregon and Washington have petitioned Congress for ratification of their agreement relating to fisheries in the Columbia River. The two Senators from Washington and Senator Chamberlain, together with all the Representatives from both states, want the bill enacted into law. Senator Lane stands alone in his opposition, and his opposition is the result of protests made by his constituents.

Astoria Fishermen Alone Oppose. Purseth represents a small element among the fishermen at Astoria. The great majority of the fishermen, and all the packers, favor the passage of the pending bill.

Not only that, the Solicitor of the Department of Commerce, the Secretary of the Department of Fisheries and the Commissioner of Fisheries all endorse and recommend the passage of the bill, so that except for Senator Lane's objection, it has unanimous endorsement in Congressional and official circles.

The Mazamas are to climb the mountain July 15 and 16. From 12 to 15 feet of snow covers the summit of the peak, which is about 5000 feet high. The climbers left Portland Saturday night and camped at Lindsey station. They made the start at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, reaching the summit at 10:30. The mountain is particularly steep, rising about 5000 feet in a distance of four miles.

LIVINGSTONE IS HONORED

DR. FRANK L. LOVELAND PAYS TRIBUTE IN SERMON.

"White Soul of Africa" Is Held Up to Congregation As Hero in Truest Meaning of Word.

Those who were at the First Methodist-Episcopal Church last evening trudged through the depths of the African jungle, transported by the dramatically descriptive eloquence of Dr. Frank L. Loveland in his topic, "David Livingstone, the White Soul of Africa."

When he was but a lad of eight years or so, Dr. Loveland told his listeners, David Livingstone and Henry M. Stanley were his heroes, and the life of Livingstone his creed.

"The tendency has ever been to exalt the heroes of warfare," said Dr. Loveland, "but in the warfare of today the old elements of heroism are gone, while science has taken its place. 'In trench fighting there is little of the heroic and all of the beastly,' was the statement with which he terminated a graphic picture, 'The youth of today and tomorrow must find some new type because the warfare that was counted heroic has become obsolete.'"

Water Blocks Road to Tank.

HOOD RIVER, Or., June 25.—(Special.)—The high water of the Columbia at this point has covered the road leading from town to the storage tanks of the Standard Oil Company, and the inconvenience caused in the delivery of gasoline and oils to local business men will probably result in an improvement of the road as soon as the water recedes.
